TANNER'S TASK.

What St. Louis Physicians Think of the Starving Feat.

Views and Opinions of Drs. Bauduy, Hughes, Hodgen and Other Experts.

At one o'clock to-day Dr. Tanner entered upon the thirteenth day of his celebrated fast. Never was such an undertaking publicly undertaken before, and consequently the matter is exciting great attention among all classes of persons. When Dr. Hammond, of New York, offered to give Mollie Fancher $1,000 if she could repeat the fast she was reported to have endured, she refused on the ground of the manifest indelicacy of having her every movement watched by a committee composed of men. Dr. Tanner was then at Minneapolis, known principally as the man who was reported to have fasted forty-two days. Discredit began to be thrown upon this achievement of his and he came to New York for the purpose of demonstrating his honesty in the matter. Dr. Hammond and he failed to agree and he nired Clarendon Hall, and went in on his own account. And now, though the hall has been almost continually crowded by a tobacco-using and unwashed crowd, though physicians, alleged by him to be intoxicated, have accused him of foul dealing, and have been unable to prove it, though he has been sorely handicapped by a continuous stream of letters and postal cards from George Francis Train, he completes his twelfth day as sound as a silver dollar. He takes long walks on the street, and runs up and down stairs in as nimble a manner as the best fed of his watchers. From interviews published below, it will be seen that leading physicians think, first, that he cannot succeed, and, secondly, if he does, he will not have demonstrated anything worth knowing. The physicians all say that walking matches and other tests of endurance were serviceable inasmuch as they encouraged out-door exercise, but that Dr. Tanner's feat, if accomplished, will teach nothing, since temperance in food is well understood already.

Members of the clergy who have been talked with seem to think that selecting forty days was an attack upon the Bible, but some of them claim that it can throw no discredit upon Holy Writ, inasmuch as the forty days' fast in the desert was never said to be miraculous on account of its length.

A ramble this morning among a few of the physicians of St. Louis elicited the following opinions and views:

Dr. J. K. Bauduy was seen at his office, 2808 Olive street.

"What do you think of Dr. Tanner's fast?"

"I have not attended to it much, but I think it very improbable that he should succeed."

"Is there any case in the books of a fast lasting as long as forty days?"

"Not any that I know of, though I have not looked up the point."

"How long do you think it possible for a man to fast?"

"Well, say ten to twelve days."

"But Dr. Tanner is now in his twelfth day and is still strong and hearty."

"In regard to Dr. Tanner, I would like to say this: While I think it very unsafe for scientists to use the word impossible and while I would be willing to believe Dr. Tanner's achievement if strong testimony were presented, yet I think that the watch under which the test is being conducted might be defeated fradulently."

"In what way?"

"Mind, I don't assert that there is fraud. I merely say that it is possible. You have seen Heller and Signor Blitz in their feats of legerdemain. You knew that you were being hoaxed, but you could not tell how. In the same way, such a thing may be happening here."

"Is the test of any scientific value?"

"None whatever. This talk in a morning paper about a dispute between the regular and the eclectic and homeopathic schools being settled by Tanner's fast is all nonsense. In febrile and inflammatory diseases—for instance, typhoid fever—where the tissues are being consumed, all physicians agree that medicine is of no avail and that nursing and nourishment are the only methods of treatment. If Dr. Tanner should succeed, any physician who would argue from his case that undue importance had been attached to nutrition, and should attempt to treat the cases before mentioned upon the starvation plan, would be ordered out of any sensible house."

"Dr. Tanner's work goes for nothing?"

"Yes; it proves nothing. Rowell is a good man in a six day match—Ten Broeck is a good horse. If Tanner succeeds, which I consider highly improbable, he will have demonstrated that he is a good faster. No inference will be possible.

DR. JOHN T. HODGEN

was in a hurry when met and had neither time nor inclination to talk about the matter.

"Will Tanner succeed?"

"How do I know? You might as well guess as I."

"Has anybody ever fasted forty days?"

"I don't know."

"If successful, will the test be of any advantage in the progress of medicine?"

"None whatever."

Dr. Hodgen concluded by saying that he had not given the experiment any attention, did not know anything about it and did not care. He seemed to think it beneath the notice of the profession, and would have nothing to do with it."

DR. J. H. MOORE

was interrogated in regard to the prevailing topic.

"What do you think of the forty-day fast?"

"I do not think the man is fasting at all."

"How is he evading detection?"

"Well, we have food down to such a fine point that a very small amount, easily smuggled, would support life a long time. A vial of Liebig's Extract of Meat, small enough to hide in the hand, would keep a man alive for a week, even if he were very near the point of starvation when he began to use it. Two such vials would do the business for Tanner."

"Is a loss of fourteen pounds in twelve days an evidence of his honesty?"

"On the contrary. He would lose that much in fluid excretions alone if he were not fasting at all. His activity and strength after such a time can only be explained on one ground—fraud."

DR. C. H. HUGHES.

"What do you think of the fast?"

"Well, it is of very little benefit, except that it will illustrate cases of enforced starvation in medical jurisprudence."

"Will he succeed?"

"It is possible to succeed, but he is not going right about it."

"How is that?"

"He exerts himself too much, and he talks too much. He ought to know, if he is a medical man, that all such actions involve a waste of muscular tissue and should be avoided. In order to succeed, he ought to as nearly hibernate as possible. He is wasting himself too much."

"If he should die, what way would you expect him to fail."

"If there is any latent disease, phthisis, cancer, etc., I would expect these to develop when the brain becomes starved. If there is no tendency, he will die of inanition."

"Will be injure himself permanently?"

"To attempt to interfere with any bodily function is perilous."

The Doctor went on to say that the possibility of fraud should be entirely removed. A man could conceal under his arms, or in other ways, enough extract of beef to support him for weeks. His idea probably is to revive an old theory of treating certain diseases, especially fevers, by starvation. The idea was exploded by Graves, of Dublin, who requested his epitaph to be 'I fed fevers.' I think he is defeating himself.

And so Dr. Tanner seems to be in a way to reap neither useful fame nor profit from his awful privation. None of the physicians would say how long he might last, but they all expected an early failure.

CASTLEWOOD HOTEL IN ASHES.

Strong Probabilities that Revengeful Incendiaries Applied the Torch.

A telegram was received this morning by an officer of the St. Louis Game and Fish Protective Association from Mr. T. Yancey, announcing that at 2 o'clock this morning the hotel at Castlewood, on the banks of the Meramec River, twenty-four miles from St. Louis, had been burned down. Particulars are expected by mail this evening. Castlewood is a suburban retreat, intended, ultimately, to be a great resort for sportsmen and amateur fishermen, being situated in the midst of a glorious country for both amusements. It will be remembered by many as the Hayden fruit farm, being in the hands of a stock company, the members of which are expected ultimately to build summer cottages there. Mr. Yancey has been in charge of the hotel and grounds this season, and, in his capacity as a member of the Fish and Game Protective Association, has apprehended and successfully prosecuted several persons for violation of the game and fish laws, and has in consequence incurred the hatred of a bad set of men. During the past month he has received a number of anonymous letters ordering him to remove, and threatening in the event of refusal to burn the hotel over his head. The general opinion of the members of the association in the city is that these characters have at last carried out their threat. Every endeavor will be made to ferret out and punish the miscreants if such is the case. The hotel was a handsome frame structure of the design peculiar to summer resorts, and the loss will reach several thousand dollars.

New Buildings.

C. Roe is building a $1,700 dwelling on the south side of Montgomery between East Sixteenth and West Sixteenth streets.

A twelve-room house is being built by L. Fruetel on the north side of North Market, between Fourteenth and Fifteenth streets.

William Schmitz is erecting a dwelling on the south side of Victor, between McNair avenue and Union street, at a cost of $2,500.

B. A. Vieker is building a dwelling house on the southside of Laclede avenue, between Cardinal and Compton avenues, at a cost of $2,800.

T. Sokel was granted a permit to-day to build a six-room dwelling-house at a cost of $1,800 on the west side of Menard, between Lynch and Pestalozzi streets.

The Belcher Sugar Refining Company was granted permission to-day to build a one-story structure 36x36 on the east side of Main between Ashley and O'Fallon streets, to be used as gas works. It will cost $600.

SANDISON IN BAD FAVOR.

The British Embassador has withdrawn his confidence from Sir Alfred Sandison, Oriental Secretary of the Legation, and it is reported that he has taken the embassy's confidential cipher out of his hands. The quarrel causes much comment. It is believed that Sir Alfred Sandison will shortly quit his post.

The Prince of Montenegro has consented to his representative remaining here for the present.

CONSTANTINOPLE, July 10 —Hussien Husni Pasha has been appointed Minister of War, replacing Osman Pasha. Several important changes have been made in the staff.

Ireland.

DUBLIN, July 10.—A large case of rifles has been seized at Woolown near Loughru. The rifles were the property of peasants but were addressed to local landlords who knew nothing of them.

ENCOURAGING REPORTS.

At a meeting of the Trustess of the Duchess of Marlborough's Irish Relief Fund, very encouraging reports the improved condition of the West of Ireland were given. The Registrar General read the returns for the last ten vearr, showing that there is nothing remarkable in the prevalence of fever Swineford, the district which is endemic.

France.

PARIS, July 10.—Paul Broca, the eminent surgeon, anthropologist and author, who, in February last, was elected life Senator as the candidate of the extreme Left, is dead. Age, 56.

THE AMNESTY VOTE.

The net result of the voting on the amnesty bill is that the Senate, instead of excluding all Communists condemned for assassination and incendiarism, makes exceptions in favor of those condemned by default, of those not sentenced to death or hard labor, and of those who, though so sentenced, have had their sentences commuted. This action excludes Rochefort and Blanqui, and the ringleaders who escaped. Those excluded will receive pardons and be allowed to re-enter France, though they will not be restored to civil rights.

THE APPROACHING FETE.

As the national fete day, the 14th of July, approaches, railway trains with pleasure parties are arriving, and high society emigrating. Bonapartist newspapers advise their readers not to participate in any way in the festivities, a circumstance that stimulates the Republican ardor. Arrangements for illuminations, fire works, etc., throughout Paris are making on a most liberal and extensive scale.

A HORRIBLE EXPLOSION.

Two Men Killed and Terribly Mutilated by a Bursting Boiler.

PITTSBURG, PA., July 10.—This morning at 2 o'clock one of a battery of seven boilers in Painter's Iron Mill, on the South Side, exploded with a loud report, killing Fred. Grable, engineer, and William Black, fireman. They were buried under the debris and horribly mangled. Grable leaves a family. Black was only eighteen years old.

The mill had not started and there were only three men in the boiler room. The other man escaped. The iron-clad building used as a boiler house was completely wrecked. The cause of the explosion is unknown. The fact that thousands of gallons of water were thrown a terrible distance shows that water was plenty. The loss to the building is $5,000. The Coroner is investigating the cause of the explosion.

Indications.

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 10.—For Tennessee and Ohio Valley clear or partly cloudy weather, light winds, mostly southerly, nearly stationary temperature and barometer. For Lower Lake Region partly cloudy weather, local rains, variable winds, mostly from southeast to southwest, stationary or lower temperature, higher barometer. For Upper Lake Region partly cloudy weather, occasional rains, variable winds, stationary or higher temperature and barometer. For Upper Mississippi and Lower Missouri Valleys partly cloudy weather, possibly occasional rains, winds mostly southeast to southwest, stationary or higher temperature, rising followed by stationary or falling barometer.

The Omaha Elevators Destroyed by Fire.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

OMAHA, July 10.—At midnight last night the Omaha elevators were discovered on fire, and within an hour had burned to the ground. They were built four years ago and since improved. They had a capacity of 200,000 bushels. The fire was undoubtedly incendiary, as the fire alarm wires were found cut. Seventy-five thousand bushels of grain were destroyed, with all the cribs and bins. The loss is $75,000, on which there is a partial insurance. Early in the evening the smelting works were partially burned; loss, $6,000, fully insured.

STILL STARVING.

Dr. Tanner Begins His Thirteenth Day Without Food.

He Will Be Forced to Take Food Should Serious Symptoms Set In.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, July 10.—Dr. Tanner continues his fast. This morning he was upon his cot, sleeping lightly, and apparently as fresh as ever. Dr. E. C. Harwood, of the regular profession, watched with the faster from 10 last night until 1 this morning, and then left him without being relieved. It appears from reports no watch was kept by regulars from the time of Dr. Harwood's departure until the arrival of Dr. Hoeber at a few minutes past 5. Dr. Tanner's pulse at 12:17 last night was 82. An hour later he was restless and moaned considerably. At 5:45 this morning

HIS TEMPERATURE

under the tongue was 97 1-4 degrees and under the arm 98 1-4 degrees. In conversing with a reporter about Tanner one of the regular attendant physicians said: "I do not believe he can fast many days longer. His temperature indicates something serious will happen. The faster's brain shows signs of weakness." One remarkable fact is the small loss of flesh thus far shown. He must have something before long to stimulate the brain. He may keep up three or four days longer. As soon as we see he is going to be affected seriously we shall

COMPEL HIM TO TAKE FOOD.

I have noticed the doctor move his mouth as though he was chewing something, but did not investigate it owing to his irritableness. It seemed very suspicious, although it may only be a habit. If he holds out for fifteen days it will be a wonder to the whole medical world, and the reason why he is able to abstain will, as now, remain a mystery."

"Do you think that a sufficient quantity of nutriment could be stored in Dr.

TANNER'S FALSE TEETH

to sustain life for two weeks?"

"No, sir; and as his teeth are where they may be easily inspected, I think it would have been discovered during my watches. Some of the Doctor's movements have been so quick I could scarcely follow them and I do not know what he might have done."

Old Baldy Goes In.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, July 10.—Gen. Baldy Smith to-day took possession of his office of Commissioner of Police, from which he has been removed by Mayor Cooper, and Inspector Walling was directed to inform the force that Gen. Smith was Police Commissioner in the place of Voorhees.

Second District Police Court.

Seventeen offenders were up in this court to-day. For disturbing the peace the following fines were imposed: Chas. Bascom, Catherine Kearing and Hannah Ford, $5 each; Margaret Rigley and George Edwards, $10; Mike Welsh, $15, and Henry Griffin, costs. For frequenting bawdy houses, Jas. Allen and John Boyd were assessed $15 each. Cola Thornton was fined $5 for loitering on the street corner. Paddy White, a trespasser, was fined $10. James Kelly was assessed $10 for obstructing a public highway. George Sayers and Herman Craig were fined $3 each for being drunk on the street. Two cases were continued.

The New Union M. E. Church.

A permit was issued from the headquarters of the Fire Department to-day for the erection of the new Union M. E. Church on the southwest corner of Garrison and Lucas avenues. When completed, the edifice, which will be of stone, will be eighty feet front and 100 feet deep. Its estimated cost is $50,000. Mr. Aug. Beinke is the architect, and expects at furthest to have it ready for occupancy in nine months.

TANNER'S BETWEEN MEALS.

He Disappoints the Doctors by Not Waking up in a Semicircle.

Making Laps Around the Hall and Capering to the Sound of Music—Ready for a Drive in the Park—Citizen Geo. Francis Train.

[From the New York Sun.]

Dr. Tanner has arranged to take a carriage ride early this morning. He will ride up Fifth avenue and through Central Park, returning to his quarters in Clarendon Hall probably at about 8 o'clock. He did not go out at all yesterday for fear of being followed by a rabble of men and boys. He says that all the boys in the neighborhood know him now, and that it would do him no good to walk out and be pestered. When the fasting man proposed the carriage ride, Dr. Gunn, who was at his side, said he should certainly have it, and promised to pay for all that Dr. Tanner would eat and drink during the little picnic, leaving the carriage hire to be paid by all the rest together.

Those who favored the theory that the faster would show signs of delirium and approaching insanity after about nine days of abstinence were again disappointed yesterday. One of the eclectics said that he was liable to wake up in the morning with tetanus, or what is popularly known as lockjaw. He would be found lying quietly on his back, but upon examination it would be discovered that his body was bowed, and that his whole weight was being borne by his heels and the back part of his head. Dr. Tanner's body on awaking yesterday morning was anything but bowed, as the following report of Drs. Davidson and Allen, who were in charge of the watch from midnight until 7 a. m. yesterday, will show:

"At midnight Dr. Tanner was sleeping upon his cot placed in the hallway window, on the second floor, his head raised slightly, and both head and shoulders beyond the face of the wall. Nothing unusual occurred during the night. When he wishes to rinse his mouth he sits up and asks for water. He makes no attempt to swallow, and insists upon remeasurement in case it is overlooked. This rinsing was done ten minutes before midnight, at 12:30, 1:15, 2:15, 2:45, 3:30, 4:45, 5:15, and 5:30 a. m. The frequency would indicate that the night was a restless one. On the contrary, he claims to have slept well and is feeling refreshed. From 2 to 5 a. m., he slept soundly, and for some of the time on his back. This is the first time he has been able to sleep with any comfort in this position. At 3:30 a. m. he complained of cold and an additional rubber blanket was spread over him. At 5:15 a. m. he arose and dressed. Every particle of clothing and the bed and its coverings were rigidly searched. He washed his face and neck and wet his head, but took no body bath. After a hasty toilet, during which we observed that the bones are still well covered with flesh, he resumed his rinsing, taking much comfort in a cooler supply which arrived late. He returned to his couch and slept till 6:40 a. m., when he again rinsed his mouth."

At 7:23 a. m. Dr. Tanner left his cot, to which he had returned after washing and dressing himself, and, going into the large hall, made nine laps around it in good time. He then went back to his cot, and at 8:45 o'clock some letters were read to him. One of these letters was from Dr. Maurice N. Miller, assistant to the Chair of Physiology in the University Medical College, who offered his services as a watcher. In the afternoon Dr. Miller arrived and began a careful study of the fasting man, at the same time taking the place of one of the regular corps of watchers now organized by the members of the Neurological Society.

Dr. Tanner said that when he took water into his mouth he felt no desire to swallow it. At 11 o'clock to-night it will be nine days since he swallowed any water, but he rinses his mouth oftener now than he did for several days after leaving off drinking altogether. Shortly before 10 a. m. he fell asleep. From that time he stuck pretty closely to his cot, the head of which projected out of window. A little after 12 o'clock noon a young lady began to play the piano in the gallery of the main hall. At the sound of the first note Dr. Tanner jumped up, shouted "Hooray! let's have some music!" and went cavorting out into the hall. The watchers, who are bound never to let him go out of their sight, jumped up and followed him. The faster afterward begged their pardon, saying he quite forgot himself. Other persons played the piano for him at different times in the course of the day.

"Oh, yes, play as much as you will. Don't ever be afraid of playing too much," said the faster when asked whether the performer should play any more. Two lady visitors sang a duet, at the end of which Dr. Tanner, who was lying on his cot in the middle of the hall, clapped his hands. After his walk nine times around the hall, Dr. Tanner's pulse was found to be at 116 per minute, but it gradually subsided to 96, and subsequently went down to 86. Among the letters received by him in the forenoon was an envelope containing a small piece of roast beef. The faster is not allowed to open his own letters. The piece of meat was shown to him, and he was asked whether he wanted it. He laughed heartily at the joke and the meat was thrown into the street. A Fulton street merchant sent him a patent hammock bed. The Doctor took to it most kindly, and said he would not lie on the old cot again. Two hours later another present was received from Dr. Kuntze, of Second avenue. It was a night-blooming cereus, which was expected to bloom about six p. m. The plant was about five feet high, and there was a single bud on it. By eight o'clock it was suddenly discovered that the bud had developed into a large and most beautiful flower. Every one present gathered around it, and none admired it more than its new owner.

The public were admitted to the hall yesterday on payment of twenty-five cents each. Dr. Tanner assented to this after much hesitation, and upon certain conditions. No visitor was to be allowed to approach him or even to speak to him, except by permission of all the watchers. He is not allowed to shake hands with any one, not excepting the watchers. During the day about two hundred persons paid to go up and look at the fasting man. Many of them were ladies. On entering the hall they were generally very shy, and glanced about carefully, as though they were fearful that their eyes would suddenly fall upon a living skeleton. Dr. Tanner cordially invited them to walk around and look at him as much as they pleased, and when he felt like it he conversed pleasantly with them from his cot in the middle of the enclosure. About 6 o'clock p. m. a woman entered, who, disregarding the printed rules for visitors, hastened up to the railing, and began to jabber loudly and rapidly: "Oh, poor man! He's surely dying. Isn't it a shame? Why don't they make him eat? Look at him, he's starved already!" she exclaimed in one breath. The watchers had shouted to her several times, but she did not heed them until one of the doctors clapped his hand upon her shoulder and motioned for her to immediately walk away. Dr. Tanner at that time was in a doze. Some old friends of the fasting man called, but they were not allowed to speak with him unless he was awake and willing to talk. On retiring for the night, Dr. Tanner was feeling well, and claimed to be confident in his ability to fast for forty days. He had not been annoyed as on the day previous, and, consequently, had preserved an unruffled temper.

George Francis Train sat under an umbrella in Madison Square park all day, and evoluted for the benefit of the fasting man, sending the resuls of each evolution to the faster regularly by postal card. His first evolution in the morning resulted as follows:

CITIZEN DR. TANNER: When "Old Cagliastro" gauged your stomach by his he put his foot in it! When calling you "Fasting Impostor," he wrote himself "Paracelsus Charlatan."

Why don't you drink? The two-inch rain adds fifty per cent to crops! The grass again is green. Water will renew your viril! Sponge! sun! open air, baths, and water alone can save you! (When delirium appears Drs. must stop experiment to avoid Berghism or courts.)

To Excelsior Snow Bank! Casabianca fire ship! Ephesian Dome History by suicide, with world for audience, discounts chance! The "unexpected" is always the "impossible." The horse died on one oat. Camel fell on last feather! Your nervousness shows mental friction. Where pulse jumps fifty, blood is abnormal!

When journals give pages to prize fights! pigeon matches! fox hunts! yacht trials! horse races! boat spurts! cock mains! rat baits! rifle shoots and walking matches! starving fasts are in order! (Demons must stand aside far Psychos.)

The new disease is the "malady of clubs," or "Delmonico deathgrip!" Nothing but your fasting evolution can checkmate Greenwood!

G. F. T.

The evolution mill went on, and by 9 a. m. the following had been ground out:

Citizen Dr. Tanner:—If frozen beer! snakes! grasshoppers! fish! lizards! insects! frogs! come to life after six months' torpor when exposed to heat it proves that that temperature is life's restoration.

Nature's subtle forces are hourly developing! Electricity is still an infant! Heat is yet a baby! Light is only a youth! Air is in its teens, while psychology is not yet born.

Don't shake hands! It taps you! Each is an electric battery. I have been a locked magnet for five years, hence my electric force which draws thousands to Madison Square.

Doubters no longer ignore you! Press has stopped ridicule! Hammond quacks are convinced! You have done well!

Facing Western flood! Easter drought! Famine! Tempest! Earthquake!—all shadowed on the wall! Seeing dead fish on lake and ocean floating ashore! Birds dropping lifeless! Cattle dying (spreading putrefaction)! Who wonders a thousand in South Adams sent for village doctor the same night?

Three miles high balloonists perish, and miners would die three miles down! This shows how narrow the margin that circles life! Thirty miles more velocity, that tempest that falls trees would cyclone houses! A million icebergs adrift may produce a tidal wave that will wipe out Coney Island, Rockaway, Long Branch in an hour!

G. F. T.

After this production Mr. Train went to the Ashland House and took his bowl of oatmeal and milk. The evolution mill then started up with unusual vigor, and by 1 o'clock p. m. the letter carrier had left the following communication at Clarenden Hall, for Dr. Tanner:

CITIZEN DR. TANNER:—Four fast evolutions organizes revolution! Three meals not only kills man, but gives woman no rest! Domestic life is household slavery! One meal over the next commences! Habit creates custom! (Even horsemen give their half pecks daily instead of whole pecks!) Plethora abdominalis is living death!

How restaurateurs chip out! Two Delmonicos! Waite! Stevens! Clapp! Overton! Chamberlain! Coleman! Stetson! Leland! Gage! Sanderson! Howard, on your plan all would be alive to-day! Every man his own doctor! When Charles O'Connor and Moses Taylor were too sick to gorge meat death was postponed!

Starvation kills sickness! Nature always takes a rest! (except in stomach!) Calm and tempest! Rough and smooth! Fast and slow! Day and night! Awake and asleep; but digestion has no holiday! The trip-hammer never stops! (Mothers are afraid one peanut will spoil a pound of rotten meat!) Babies never vomit milk till they slop over!

Depopulating England with American meat is just retribution for making this country a pasturage for Britain's aristocracy! Le Duc says cattle are diseased in seventeen States!

ELOPED WITH THE HIRED MAN.

Flight of a Pike County Dairyman's Daughter With Her Lover.

MILFORD, PENN., July 7.—David Paddock is a prominent dairy farmer, residing in Dingman township, Pike county, Penn. Mr. Paddock, his wife, several daughters, and a hired man named Andrew Robbins, constituted the family. Of late Robbins has been paying much attention to Rosa, Mr. Paddock's youngest daughter. The friendship ripened into love, and they finally resolved to start out in life on their own responsibility. Rosa kept her father's business accounts, and last Saturday evening Robbins presented his bill to Mr. Paddock for payment. Nothing strange was thought of this, for Robbins said nothing about going away. Mr. Paddock paid him off and at the usual hour retired for the night. After receiving his money Robbins went to Milford, where he procured a team, and, after doing some shopping, drove to Mr. Paddock's and hid his horse in the road a short distance from the house. Rosa, who thoroughly understood the programme, had packed such clothing as she thought she most needed in a satchel during her lover's absence, and when he returned, late in the night, she was ready to join him. Robbins procured a ladder, which he placed against the house directly under Rosa's window. This done, she raised the window, and, after handing down the baggage, descended the ladder to the ground herself, and, entering the carriage, the two drove off together.

Their absence was not discovered until the following morning, when, neither appearing, the family at once became suspicious. The room of Rosa was visited, and found to be in great confusion, what things she had left lying scattered about the floor. The room of Robbins, the hired man, was found in about the same condition. Mr. Paddock made examination, and found where the horse had been tied, and where the wagon had been turned. This satisfied him that they had eloped. He at once came to Milford, where he learned that they had crossed the Delaware into New Jersey. This is the last that has been seen of them. The horse and carriage were returned to Milford Monday by a boy, who said he did not know the persons who paid him to drive the horse back. It is thought they drove as far as Newton, Sussex county, N. J., and there took cars for some place unknown to the Paddocks. Mr. Paddock has had a warrant issued for the arrest of Robbins. The affair has created much excitement in the neighborhood, as the young lady was very respectably connected.

THE PRICE OF A LIFE.

Inhuman Conduct on the High Seas—A Dreadful Adventure.

[From the London Telegraph.]

Some days ago a young telegraph clerk from Otranto, named Salvatore Montinari, was picked up on the high seas, at about equal distance from the Italian and Dalmatian coasts, by the Russian bark Jenny, Capt. Hallstrom. Montinari, two days before his rescue, had hired a small boat, with the intention of enjoying an afternoon's fishing, and had rowed himself out two or three miles, when one of the sudden gales that render Adriatic navigation so perilous arose and, despite his desperate efforts to reach the shore, soon drove him out of sight of land. For nearly forty-eight hours he struggled against winds and waves, and contrived to keep his tiny craft afloat, though he lost an oar early in his involuntary cruise, and sustained severe hurts upon his head, right foot, chest and both hands. Towards sunset of the second day, when he had given up all hope of human aid, he espied afar off the smoke arising from a steamer's funnel. By almost superhuman effort he succeeded in approaching the steamer within hailing distance, and piteously implored its captain to take him on board. The latter, addressing him in French, asked him, "how much he would give to be saved;" to which barbarous question Montinari replied, "A thousand francs." "That is too little," rejoined his inhuman interlocutor, and the steamer proceeded on her way. Eleven hours later he was rescued by the Jenny, however, almost exhausted by fatigue, hunger and loss of blood, and was subsequently put ashore at Ivica, where he communicated the details of his dreadful adventure to the local authorities and obtained their assistance to effect his return to his duties at Otranto.

THE FOLLOWING LETTER is from C. A. Getty, Esq., of Amboy, Ill., a gentleman well known in military, political and social circles. He was the founder of the prosperous order known as "Our Country's Defenders," and has for years acted as its Adjutant-General. Unfortunately his appetite for alcohol overcame his better judgment and brought him down to the lamentable condition which he describes in his letter:

AMBOY, ILL., July 6, 1880.

Dr. Leslie E. Keeley:

DEAR SIR—I wish to add my voice to the many others which have justly sounded the praises of your wonderful discovery, because the shackles and bonds of slavery forged and riveted by alcohol have been broken, and I have been freed by using your Double Chloride of Gold Cure for Drunkenness. I formed the habit of drinking during the war and have been a very hard drinker ever since, especially during the last eight years. I had gone so far that most of my friends gave me up as past all help, and after repeated struggles to save myself I finally submitted to my fate as LOST; but an angel in the shape of a circular came across my path bearing the joyful information of where a remedy could be found which would at once restore me to that place from which I had been dragged down by my master, alcohol. To-day I can fully, freely and thankfully say that your life-saving, manhood-restoring Double Chloride of Gold has well and faithfully done its work on me, and to-day I can truthfully aver that I have lost all appetite for liquors or stimulants of any kind. The cure has been a grateful surprise to myself and friends and a source of joy to my family, who will never cease to bless your existence. I have submitted to what in other days would have been ordeals impossible to withstand, but am happy to write you that they have ceased to be ordeals, as much so as to any man wholly and completely antipathetic to the deadly curse. I am cured, and God bless you for it. Hoping that many others who are wearing the strong, degrading bonds may take your wonderful remedy and be made free once more,

I am, with a heart overflowing with gratitude,

C. A. GETTY.

A SONNET TO SUMMER.

The summer, the divinest summer burns,
The skies are bright with azure and with gold,
The mavis and the nightingale by turns
Amid the woods a soft enchantment hold;
The flowering woods with glory and delight,
Their tender leaves unto the air have spread;
The wanton air amid their alleys bright
Doth softly fly and a light fragrance shed;
The nymphs within the silver fountains play,
The angels on the golden banks recline,
Wherein great Flora, in her bright array,
Hath sprinkled her ambrosial sweets divine;
Or else I gaze upon that beauteous face,
O Amoret! and think these sweets have place.

City Life Not Very Sociable.

[From the New York Evening Post.]

A gentleman at Williamstown, on the piazza of the Mansion House, stepped up to another and asked, "Are you an alumnus?" "Yes." "Of what class?" "The class of '55" "I am of that class," replied the other. "Where are you living?" "For thirteen years I have been living in New York." "Why, I live there; where do you attend church?" "I have attended Dr. Crosby's church all the thirteen years." "Indeed! For as much as much as thirteen years I have been going to that church."

Their pews proved to be on opposite sides of the same edifice, and Presbyterian sociability had in all that period failed somehow to bring together those men, who for four years here had known each other like brothers.

AN ORIENTAL TALE.

There was a sick monarch of Siam,
Who sighed, "What a dunderhead I am!"
I'll order my maid
To make quince marmalade,
And also some goosberry jam."

She did it, and said to him: "Few are
So very sagacious as you are!
'Tis sow-ar, but still
I trust that it will Effect an immediate cu-ar."

She made him of each a great vial,
And told him to give it a trial;
Though dreadfully sick,
It cured him so quick
That soon he was perfectly wial.

THE TRUE STORY OF BLOOMERISM

Its First Introduction at Seneca Falls—Elizabeth Cady Stanton and Mrs. Bloomer.

[From the Cincinnati Gazette.]

Byron defined military glory to consist in getting killed in battle and having one's name given wrong in the bulletins of the casualties. The battle of Bunker Hill was really fought on Breed's Hill, and to the list of historical and biographical mistakes must be added the fact that the Bloomer costume was not invented or first worn by the woman whose name it bears. It originated, however, in her town, Seneca Falls, N. Y.

As we learn from a lifelong resident of the place, who has furnished Good Words with a detailed account of the many isms for which Seneca Falls became notorious between 1840 and 1860, Elizabeth Cady Stanton—who, with Lucretia Mott, Martha Wright and Mary Anne McClintoc, founded there the woman's rights movement in July, 1848—preceded Mrs. Bloomer in the adoption of bifurcated garments. Yet as there were brave men before Agamemnon, there was a brave innovator whom Mrs. Stanton, leader as she was in all radicalism, was willing to follow. Her cousin, Mrs. E. S. Miller, a daughter of Gerrit Smith, was a great pedestrian, and in 1850 concluded that a short dress and Turkish trousers would form a convenient garb for her long country walks. She was impelled by no "emancipation" theories, however. While visiting Mrs. Stanton she showed that lady what she had done. Mrs. S., forgetful that in her speeches she had exalted the advantages of long flowing robes over the masculine costume, and anxious for a new sensation, at once took up the cause of "dress reform," and soon appeared on the street in trousers. The writer whom we have mentioned says:

"Never shall I forget that first appearance. Mrs. Stanton is not slight or sylph-like in her proportions; she is, not to put too fine a point on it, the reverse. Imagine her then in full black satin frock cut off at the knee, with Turkish trousers of the same material, her wrap a double broche shawl, and on her head the hideous great bonnet then in fashion. I have seen scarecrows that did credit to farmers' boys' ingenuity, but never one better calculated to scare all birds, beasts, and human things than was Mrs. Stanton in the Bloomer dress. She was accompanied by Mrs. Miller in the same dress, and followed by a crowd of boys yelling, singing, and laughing, while every door and window was lined with staring faces."

Mrs. Bloomer was the wife of a young lawyer of the town, and a devoted follower of Mrs. Stanton. She was in all respects the latter's opposite, "thin, almost meager in her proportions, short, with a small head, and a dark complexion; not at all a handsome woman, rather plain on the contrary." She was not well educated, but was very energetic and industrious, and had become the editor of a paper called the Lily, to which Mrs. Stanton was the principal contributor. Of course she must follow her ideal, and so she put on the dress which has perpetuated her name, but not until three months after Mrs. Miller had brought the pattern to town. Our authority says:

"She had a far better figure for the dress than had Mrs. Stanton, and looked better in the Bloomers than any other person I have ever seen wear them. For one thing, she discarded the bonnet then universally worn, and assumed a round hat, something like the sun and seaside hats now worn. Oh! the excitement of that summer! Reporters from the city papers were seen on our streets, evidently expecting to find all the female population wearing the hideous toggery. The Home Journal, then under Willis and Morris, the leading literary paper of the country, sent a correspondent here to learn all that was to be learned about the private lives of Mrs. Stanton and Mrs. Bloomer. In 1850 Mrs. Bloomer made a tour through the State, speaking in Metropolitan Hall, in New York, to one of the largest audiences ever assembled within the walls of that building. She also spoke at that time and at others, in all the principal cities of the State, crowds flocking to see and hear the famous Mrs. Bloomer."

She does not seem to have had any special eloquence, and as soon as the novelty of her subject had been exhausted, she sank into obscurity again. "Bloomers" appeared in various places all over the country, but they were soon laughed off the streets. The news, if not the contagion, extended across the Atlantic, and Punch made itself merry in a series of pictures in which dissipated "Bloomers" endeavored to inveigle young men from their mothers' side; and every other imaginable class of the new genus was capitally travestied. The epidemic was soon at an end. To use Mrs. Stanton's own expression, she dropped the new costume, "like a hot potato," and was overjoyed in being no longer stared at. Mrs. Bloomer felt chagrined at the desertion of her leaders, and wrote sarcastically of her in the Lily as "one we wot of." She had gained notoriety and a large subscription list to the Lily, but after a few years returned to her old-fashioned dress, and has since been living quietly in the West.

EATING QUEER FISH.

The Members of the Ichthyophagous Club Subject Their Stomachs to a Most Peculiar Feast.

[From the New York World.]

Gen. Stewart L. Woodford, Gen. Horace Porter, Hon. Smith Ely, Jr., Hon. R. B. Roosevelt, Gen. Winslow, Seth Thomas, George M. Hard, Gaston L. Fuardent, Stillman S. Conant, R. J. Cortiss, William M. Fleiss, George P. Rowell, Isaac W. England, W. A. Paten, W. M. Laffan, the Long Beach millionaire, Dr. Alexander C. Skane, Capt. J. H. Mortimer, and Major Constable, of Afghanistan, of the Ichthyophagous Club, ate dinner at the Hotel Brighton, Coney Island, last evening. The object of the club is to digest shark fins, squids, swordfish steaks, sea robins, moon fishes, and other fishes not generally appreciated. Geo. F. Seger, a Swiss ichthyotomist, was the chef de cuisine. The bill of fare included the above variety of peculiar fish, and some other more popular articles of food. Mr. John Ford, of the Times, presided at the feast, the idea of which is said to have been born in the versatile intellect of the Hon. Robert B. Roosevelt. It proved a great success. Mr. Ford toasted the feast and him who created it. Mr. Roosevelt responded in his usual witty way. His speech was followed by those of Gen. Porter, Gen. Woodford, Barnet Philips, I. W. England, Eugene Blackford, and others. Liberati's bugle came in from the seashore, but did not intefere with the guests' digestion. A glance over the features of the feast shows that the rasor clams were devilled and toothsome, that the horseshoe crabs, though stuffed with a questionable quantity of beets, eggs and the meat picked from the eggs of the lumbering ichthyoids, were voted a marvel; that the squib and the brook trout were so dressed that they tasted more like oil and eggs than fish, that the whitebait and swordfish and the wolffish were relished, despite their wonderfully strange taste; that the moonfish was the delicate article found at Fort Capron, and that everything was jolly because everything was unique.

What to Drink in Summer.

[From the New York Times.]

A great harm to health and many deaths result, as everybody knows, from injudicious use of cold liquids to quench thirst during our blazing summers. Persons exposed to the heat, especially those hard at work, cannot or will not refrain from drinking, for they feel the need of supplying the waste from copious perspiration. What, then, shall they drink? Water seems, under the circumstances, to be inadequate to the wants of the system. It passes through the circulation to the skin as through a sieve, and flows over the surface in streams. A big drink of cold, or even cool, water on an empty stomach is very dangerous; it is liable to produce sudden death. The danger may be avoided, it is said, by putting farinaceous substances, particularly oat meal, with the water to be drunk by laborers, the proper proportion being three or four ounces of meal to a gallon of water. Why oatmeal should be better than rye, millet, buckwheat, or cornmeal, can not easily be determined; but those who have used oatmeal, especially firemen, coal heavers, and the like, say that it gives them greater endurance and increases their strength. This may be a mere notion, but the peculiar aroma of the oats may be so associated with an agreeable stimulation of the alimentary mucous surface as to promote complete digestion. The meal appears to fill the blood vessels without increasing the cutaneous exhalations. Workmen who have tried acid, saccharine or alcoholic drinks have invariably expressed unsatisfactory results. Water with oatmeal seems to be by all odds the most wholesome and desirable summer drink for manual laborers.

DISEASE SENT BY MAIL.

A Horrible Infection, Intended, Mr. Comstock Thinks, for Himself, Fallen Upon His Clerk.

[From the New York World.]

About two months ago an envelope bearing a New York post-mark and directed to Anthony Comstock was delivered at his office, 150 Nassau street. He was absent at the time and the envelope being torn partly open, by rough handling in the mail, perhaps, Mr. Ducret, his secretary, opened it in the presence of several clerks in the office. It contained what appeared to be a porous plaster covered with foul matter. Its odor was very offensive, and those in the office at the time were at once affected by an itching and prickling sensation about the face. Ducret, who opened the envelope, handled the matter and smelled of it. When Mr. Comstock arrived two hours later he suspected that the missive had been sent to him by some enemy to do him bodily harm. He caused the package to be destroyed, and sending to a drug store he procured a wash for himself and his clerks, as well as a disinfectant for his office. The subject was then dismissed and thought no further of. Two weeks later, while Ducret was walking with his brother, he noticed a return of the itching sensation about his neck. It was accompanied by an unusual purple discoloration of the skin. He returned to his house at 168 Clifton place, Brooklyn, ill. Beginning at the lower extremities the disease gradually extended up over his whole body. The purple appearance of the skin was succeeded by a reddish rash, accompanied by a high fever, and Dr. John B. Quinn, of 423 Kent avenue, who was called in, told a reporter, last night, that the patient appeared at first sight to be suffering from scarlet fever. The symptoms, however, soon assumed more the appearance of erysipelas. Ducret has now been confined to his bed for seven weeks. During that time the disease has been accompanied by a constant flaking off of the skin, and the fever has continued very high with but brief intervals. The joints began to swell, first on the left side, until it was found necessary to open the swelling at the left knee-joint, and the left arm has become stiff at the elbow. At present the right knee is greatly swollen, and a similar operation will have to be performed. The patient is helpless and is in constant suffering. He has wasted away almost to a skeleton, and his physicians fear that he will not have strength to withstand the disease. Dr. Quinn and Dr. Hutchinson cannot make a diagnosis of the case. It is, they say, an unquestionable case of pyæmia, the pus being of a very malignant type, and Dr. Quinn thinks that they have gained ground against the blood poison. But they are completely at a loss as to the nature of the poison, and can not do otherwise than act upon the hypothesis that the envelope addressed to Mr. Comstock, which Mr. Ducret opened, was the cause of the malady. Dr. Quinn said last evening that Ducret was far from being out of danger, but they had hope that he would be able to hold out until the blood poison had been expelled.

Mr. Comstock, who was found at his residence, 354 Grand avenue, Brooklyn, said last evening that he had been anxious to keep the facts of Mr. Ducret's sickness from the public for several reasons, one of which was that he did not desire to give the perpetrator of the deed—which he imputes without question to a vicious intent—the satisfaction of knowing that his missive had so nearly reached its destination. He said that he was satisfied that he knew who sent it, but he was afraid he could not command evidence enough on which to make any arrest. He suspects a practitioner in New York whom he once arrested for a crime, and to whom he afterwards traced an infernal machine which he had received by mail, but from which he had escaped uninjured. The address of the present package, he says, was in the same handwriting. Ducret, who is but twenty-three, he says was a most faithful young man in the discharge of his duties as stenographer and secretary, and the Society for the Suppression of Vice has cared for him during his sickness.

Last night Mr. Ducret was resting more comfortably, his brother said, but they could not see any material improvement in his condition.

Colored Justice.

[From the Little Rock Gazette.]

Several days ago a white man was arraigned before a colored justice down the country on charges of killing a man and stealing a mule.

"Wall," said the Justice, "de facks in dis case shell be weighed wid keerfulness, an' ef I nang yer tain't no fault ob mine."

"Judge, you have no jurisdiction only to examine me."

"Dat sorter work 'longs ter de raigular Justice; but yer see I'se been put on as a special. A special hez de right ter make a mouf at S'preme Court ef he chuses."

"Do the best for me you can, Judge."

"Dat's what I'se gwine ter do. I'se got two kinds of law in dis court, de Arkansaw an' de Texas law. I generally gins a man de right ter choose for hisse'f. Now, what law does yer want; de Texas or de Arkansaw?"

"I believe I'll take the Arkansas."

"Wall, in dat case, I'll dismiss you fur stealin' de mule—"

"Thank you, Judge."

"An' hang you fur killin' de man—"

"I believe, Judge, that I'll take the Texas."

"Wall, in dat case I dismiss you fur killin' de man—"

"You have a good heart, Judge."

"And hang you fur stealin' de mule. I'll jis take the 'casion heah ter remark, dat de only difference 'tween de two laws iz de way yer state de case."

An Unfortunate Mistake.

A Paris dispatch to the London Standard says: "An Enoch Arden case has just been brought to light at Agen. During the war of 1870 a French soldier named Teule was taken prisoner by the Germans and conveyed across the Rhine. He was shortly after condemned to death by the German authorities for shooting at his jailer while trying to escape. At the same time another French prisoner was sentenced to ten years' imprisonment for a similar offense. Both men were taken to the same fortress, and by some mistake changed for each other, and the wrong person was shot. Teule kept the secret to himself, and having served the ten years' imprisonment, returned to his native town the other day; but his wife in the meantime, having been informed by the French authorities that her husband had been shot, married again, and has now several children. It is not stated whether Teule followed the example of Tennyson's hero."

—Mr. Tennyson is described as once pointing out some land to a friend and saying: "I bought that out of 'Enoch Arden.'" Dr. Smiles is said to have built a house at Blackheath out of the proceeds of "Self-Help."

RIVER NEWS.

THE Fannie Lewis sails at 5 p. m. to-day for Kansas City.

THE Grand Tower packet, Gen. Rucker, leaves at 5 p. m.

CAPT. JOE CARPENTER, who still lives, is visiting Nashville.

THE Northwestern, Capt. Davis, leaves this evening for Keokuk.

THE Dora leaves for Clarksville every Monday, Wednesday and Friday afternoon.

SIOUX CITY, 7: The Far West has been sold to the Peck-Powers combination. She loads for Benton.

THE fine passenger steamer Halliday, Capt. Emerson W. Gould, will leave for New Orleans this evening.

THE report that the independent packet City of Augusta had withdrawn permanently from the Red River trade has been confirmed.

PORTSMOUTH, O., July 8: A new boat is being built here, called Caddo Belle, to run in the Red River trade. Progress is being rapidly made.

THE popular passenger steamer Josie, Captain John B. Davis, leaves this afternoon for all landings to St. Paul. Her landing is at the foot of Washington avenue.

PITTSBURG, 8: Baltic and barges receiving for St. Louis. Steamboat and coal men are delighted with the height and dimensions of the Smithfield street bridge.

HUNTINGTON, W. VA., July 8, 7:41 p. m.—The Hudson ran from Sandy to Huntington in one hour and ten minutes, making one stop. PHIL ANSCHUTZ, Master.

THE fast and graceful packet Mary Morton will leave the Diamond Jo wharf on Monday afternoon for St. Paul. She is a great passenger boat, and will make "rapid transit" popular on the upper river.

THE J. B. M. Kehlor, Capt. Wm. C. Kimber, will leave this evening for New Orleans, Natchez, Vicksburg and all way landings. Like the Stanard, she will discharge an immense amount of freight at Memphis.

NEW ORLEANS Times, 8: The Belle of Shreveport, off last evening for St. Louis, had about 500 hhds sugar, besides a big lot of iron ties, bagging, empty bottles, etc., and, taking it all in all, she had an excellent trip, considering the season.

J. D. LAWNIN, steamboat, barge and scaffold joiner, will immediately commence to put in condition for bulk grain carrying several barges of the fleets controlled by Col. Branch and Major Wehrman. Huge are the preparations to move grain on the rivers.

IT is satisfactory to know that the towboat J. S. Neel trouble was apparently about arbitrated to a final settlement yesterday. She goes from here direct to the Tennessee to load barges with ore for the Upper Ohio, and the Hudson boys are likely to see their pet steamer home at Middleport in a few days.

MADISON, IND., July 8.—Capt. R. H. Stout, of St. Louis, is in the city to receive his new boat, the Menomonie, just completed here. The new raft boat Menomonie, built in this city, departed for the Upper Mississippi to-day, everything working lovely and satisfactorily.

PITTSBURG Chronicle: "The Evans-Coulson Line steamers Montana and Dakota are still in retirement at St. Louis, and the Wyoming, of the same line, at last accounts, was in the excursion business at the same point." They'll all be excursion steamers soon, in a good trade carrying large cargoes and long passenger lists.

DAVENPORT paper: The United States steamer General Barnard is only waiting for the river to reach a natural stage before beginning the season's work. At no time for fifteen years past has there been so much to do in the way of removing snags, as the swift current of the high water stages cut into the banks in many places.

THE two new barges for the St. Louis Kansas City Steamboat Company now building are to be these dimensions, as stated by E. W. Gould, the veteran boatman and boat architect: Length 160 feet, breadth 26 feet; depth 6 feet; capacity from 25,000 to 30,000 bushels bulk grain. The company has not decided, it seems, whether to place cargo boxes on them or not.

A Cubic Mile of Water.

Lieutenant Montgomery Meigs, of the United States Engineer's office, Rock Island, favors us with the following interesting calculations on "A Cubic Mile of Water:"

During the past high water the United States Engineers were afforded the opportunity of gauging a great river or of measuring its discharge when swollen to one of its highest if not the highest stage known.

As some of your readers may have observed and speculated on the erratic movements and constant whistlings of the little steam launch employed in making the measurements, I beg leave to communicate the following by permission of Captain A. Mackenzie, Corps Engineers in charge of the river improvements, as having some general interest.

The discharge was obtained by float measurements for velocity of the current, combined with an accurate cross section of the river found by sounding, on June 26, at a stage of 18 4-10 feet above low water.

The discharge was found to be 251,348 cubic feet per second, or 13 1-4 times the low water discharge. The greatest velocity was found at mid-depth to be 3 8-10 miles per hour; greatest depth about 28 feet.

To understand better the vast amount of water contained in the above discharge we will suppose a lake twenty miles long and five miles wide. The river flowing as above would raise its surface at the rate of 7 8-10 feet per day.

In about a week the above discharge would amount to one cubic mile of water, or enough to fill the bed of the Mississippi, supposing it to be 2,737 feet wide and averaging 22 1-4 feet deep, from St. Paul to 50 miles below Rock Island, a distance of 458 miles.

AMUSEMENTS THIS EVENING.

UHRIG'S CAVE—Miles' Juvenile Opera Company.

THE report that Gen. Hancock speculated in oil must have been started by Petroleum V. Nasby.

IT is expected that the sub-committee appointed for the purpose will wait on Messrs. Hancock and English the latter part of next week to formally notify them of their nomination. The letters of acceptance have been prepared, and that of Gen. Hancock is said to be quite lengthy.

THE census has been a surprise in more ways than one. A number of the Southern States show an increase that is positively startling to Republican partisans, who have constantly pictured the South in a state of retrogression and slow depopulation. In many of the Republican States the growth has not been near so great as was expected, and in Vermont there has been an actual decrease of inhabitants.

BROTHER JAMES, President of the College of Christian Brothers, generously offers to board and educate the son of Phelim Toole until he reaches a period when he can take care of himself. This noble proffer is characteristic of the gentleman who makes it and of the worthy institution he represents. We have no doubt it will be accepted, and we hope that the fatherless boy will grow up to reflect credit upon himself and honor upon those who have extended to him this munificent benefaction.

THE Republicans of Indiana will open the campaign on July 15, when De La Matyr will take the stump. Carl Schurz appears at Indianapolis on the 18th. As is the custom the Republicans are beginning to import a large number of negroes from Kentucky, and it is expected that the party vote will be increased several thousand in this way. For voting imported Kentuckians Indiana has always been famous, and the ability of the hoop-pole Democrats in this direction is not to be sneezed at. Indiana is irrevocably Democratic.

THE situation in Maine is giving a good deal of concern to the Republican managers, and preparations are being made to rally the Republican vote as it was never rallied before. Much anxiety arises from the alleged lukewarmness of Blaine and his special followers, whose disgust over the result of the Chicago Convention is illy concealed. The Democratic and Greenback coalition is said to be stronger than ever. Two years ago the Republicans of Maine were defeated by a thousand majority in favor of the combined opposition, and while it might be surprising it is not impossible that a similar result may be attained this year.

A LARGE case of rifles have been seized at Woolown, near Loughru, Ireland. Cable dispatches state that the arms were the property of peasants, but were addressed to local landlords, who knew nothing of them. This appears to confirm the statement, recently made, that Fenianism has been growing rapidly in Ireland for the past few months, and that the spirit of armed revolution has increased so rapidly as to alarm the English Government. It is stated that Mr. Gladstone himself is greatly concerned over the situation of affairs, and fears that if the compensation-for-disturbance bill is not passed, the public tranquility will be seriously disturbed. Land agitation has been unusually active for several weeks, and all the meetings have been characterized by a semi-military organization. Want and famine and bad laws have aroused the peasantry to a state of desperation. Hostility to the English Government has not been so open and bitterly expressed for years. There are evidently troublous times ahead for the Emerald Isle.

OVER $4,000 has already been raised for the widow of Phelim Toole, and the indications are that this sum will be largely increased before the generosity of St. Louis has been exhausted. In addition to the amounts heretofore handed to the POST-DISPATCH, Mr. W. R. Lucas sends $5, accompanied by the following original plan for raising a grand fund of $25,000.

ST. LOUIS, JULY 10, 1880.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Inclosed I hand you $5 for the Phelim Toole fund, and make this proposition to the people of St. Louis: That one thousand, or more, generous citizens come forward with a $5 note and sign an obligation, agreeing and binding themselves to each give $5 for the same purpose on the 1st of January next, and for the next 1st of January following for three more years, making a total of $5,000 now and $5,000 for the next four firsts of January, or a grand total of $25,000. Start the ball, and secure the names of 1,000 persons and obligations. Here is my money, name and obligation.

W. R. LUCAS,
112 Vine street.

DEMOCRACY NOT CONFEDERACY.

Our sincerely esteemed contemporary, the Times, is either very unfair or very imaginative in attributing sentiments to us which we never entertained and never expressed. We never did say that A, B or C should not be nominated for the Governorship solely because he was a Confederate. But we do say that solely because A, B or C was a Confederate General he should not be nominated. Is the difference not clear?

But our neighbor indulges in so many fictions that a few facts about our position may again be repeated for the special benefit of our Confederate friends on the Times. It says:

Our contemporary proposes to apply its proscriptive test, if not to its friends, at least to its co-partisans. To make anything of a case it has to indulge largely in assumptions. The Republicans defended their action on the ground of principle, but it, being less frank, defends its action on the ground of expediency. In other words, while it does not presume to say that Democrats in Missouri, "which is not like other Southern States," can be rightfully proscribed, it thinks that the Democrats here ought to act as individuals do for "their best interests"—that is to say, they ought to do wrong, for the sake of the prospect of carrying a point and gaining a possible temporary advantage.

There is not a single word of truth in this. We hope that Col. Crittenden will be beaten if he runs on his war record. We hope that A, B or C will be beaten if he runs on his Confederate record. We are sick and tired of this "war" business. We want a Governor nominated because of his fitness, his civil qualities and learning to-day—not because he was a good soldier fifteen years ago. But this war business must stop on both sides. And to say that we are proscriptive and guilty of wrong because we think that no man should be nominated on the strength of his Confederate record, but with view to his fitness, is grossly unfair. To deny that, everything else being even, a candidate without a Confederate record would be beneficial to the national interest of the party is childish.

Again the Times says:

Our contemporary would allow ex-Confederates to vote—at least it has not yet said that it wouldn't—but not to hold office, except when nobody objected, for if one loyal Democrat has a right to object every other loyal Democrat would have the same right. This would be disfranchisement in fact if not in terms. A limited choice is no choice. In the darkest of despotisms a citizen may do as he pleases, if he pleases to do as his masters command.

Who is the "master" of the Democratic party in this State? Is it not the Confederate element? Is it not a notorious and undeniable fact that this most active, spirited, vigorous and respectable element is the complete master of the party in this State? Is there any intelligent child that does not know that the majority of the State Convention will be composed of this element, and be able to nominate Jefferson Davis if it so pleases? Does the editor of the Times not know perfectly well that Col. Crittenden cannot possibly be nominated except by the votes of a large number of the active, sensible and patriotic ex-Confederates who support him? How absurd then to talk about "ostracism" or "despotism" over this element.

Again the Times says:

The Southern element of the party exerted itself to bring about the nomination for President of a distinguished Northern General, and yet we are seriously informed that the Northern element of the party will refuse to vote for him if a gallant Southern soldier is nominated for Governor of Missouri.

But we never said anything of the kind. We simply said that it would be wiser, more in the interest of the national canvass, more in accord with the Union idea which nominated Hancock, to nominate for the Governorship the best fitted candidate, though he happens to have no Confederate record. We did say, and do not hesitate to repeat it to sensible Confederates, that there are really but three great offices in Missouri that are nationally representative, and that as the two seats in the Senate are both filled by ex-Confederate Generals, it would be unwise and impolitic to put a third into the Governorship, at the very moment when the great Republican charge is that Democracy means Confederacy. That's all.

The trouble with the Times is that it confounds Democracy with Confederacy. But there are a great many Democrats in the land, it should remember, who are not Confederates, and who are not ashamed of it.

But, says our neighbor, "neither the South nor the party were injured by the election of Hampton as Governor of South Carolina."

Well, this is true. And if the Times will give us a Wade Hampton in Missouri we shall as gladly support him for Governor, or anything else, as we supported George Vest.

We supported George Vest against Mr. Glover not because he was a Confederate, but because we sincerely believed him better fitted, and, from a party stand-point, better entitled to that position. And Vest was nominated by the decisive votes of Union men who took the same view.

We now support Col. Crittenden, not because he was a Union soldier, but because we sincerely believe him best fitted for the position. And he will be nominated by sensible ex-Confederates who take the same view.

This is all.

A GOOD POINT.

Only a few days ago we said that the best way to stop the talk about the legislative theft of the electoral vote of New York was to announce plainly that the Democratic Congress would not count such votes; that, no matter what is done at Albany, the count takes place at Washington.

The right of Congress in this matter was sufficiently demonstrated in 1876, when the Republicans insisted that Congress could count or reject electoral votes as it pleased. But a new and very strong point is made by that brilliant Democrat, Frank Hurd, the member of Congress from Toledo.

Mr. Hurd calls attention to the Fourteenth Amendment, which prohibits any change or abridgment of popular elections. Here it is:

Section 2. Representatives shall be apportioned among the several States according to their respective numbers, counting the whole number of persons in each State, excluding Indians not taxed. But when the right to vote at any election for the choice of electors for President and Vice-President of the United States, Representatives in Congress, the executive and judicial officers of a State or the members of the Legislature thereof, is denied to any male inhabitants of such State being twenty-one years of age and citizens of the United States, or in any way abridged, except for participation in rebellion, or other crime, the basis of representation therein shall be reduced in the proportion which the number of such male citizens shall bear to the whole number of male citizens twenty-one years of age in such State.

That is to say, if the New York Legislature abolish the popular election it loses the entire electoral vote.

This is a pretty good point. Mr. Hurd deserves credit for it. We will hear no more about that New York business. It will popularize the Fourteenth Amendment with Democrats.

AN ENORMOUS GROWTH.

THE best guide at hand by which to determine the growth of the city in business is the tables of receipts and shipments of freight. The freight we take and the freight we send out represents the volume of our trade. We have not the figures giving the receipts and shipments of freight for 1870; but have them for 1875, which, with those of 1879, are as follows:

Receipts of freight, in tons, in 1875	3,896,295
Receipts of freight, in tons, in 1879	5,352,648
Increase of receipts, in tons.	1,455,753
Shipments of freight, in tons, in 1875	1,940,515
Shipments of freight, in tons, in 1879	2,962,861
Increase of shipments, in tons	1,022,316

With the growth indicated by these figures there is no doubt that the receipts and shipments of freight in St. Louis for 1880 will be twice as great as in 1870.

A glance at the growth of several of the more important branches of business indicates the vast growth of the whole volume of our trade in ten years.

There were received in St. Louis in 1870 6,638,253 bushels of wheat; in 1879, 17,093,362 bushels—an increase of 10,455,109 bushels. This line of business has nearly trebled.

There were received in St. Louis in 1870 3,000,000 bushels of corn; in 1879, 13,000,000 bushels—an increase of 10,000,000 bushels. This line of business has more than quadrupled.

There were received in St. Louis in 1870 20,270 bales of cotton; in 1879-80, 476,437 bales—an increase of 456,167 bales. Here is an increase unparalleled.

There were packed in St. Louis in 1870 241,216 head of hogs; in 1879, 629,261 head—an increase of 388,045 head. Here is an increase of more than double.

There were received in St. Louis in 1870 310,850 head of hogs; in 1879, 1,762,724 head—an increase of 1,451,874 head. This line of business has more than quadrupled.

There were received in St. Louis in 1870 201,422 head of cattle; in 1879, 420,654 head—an increase of 219,232 head. This business has more than doubled.

There were shipped from St. Louis in 1870 1,790,739 barrels of flour; in 1879, 3,045,000 barrels—an increase of 1,544,261 barrels. Here is an increase of nearly double.

In 1870 St. Louis had 3,392 miles of railroad; in 1880, 8,855 miles—an increase of 5,428 miles. Here is an increase of more than double.

Whatever there may be said of the growth of St. Louis in population, her growth in business has certainly been enormous.

The Passing of Rutherford.

[From Puck.]

"No," said Rutherford's washerman, "me no likee Melican Plesident man; me no makee money washee washee his shirtee—too muchee muchee trills."

"No," said Le Duc, "I do not expect to be reappointed by Garfield. No one will ever appreciate my tea as the present administration has."

"Our time is indeed brief," said Thompson, "but before we go out of office I'll get a United States ship up the Wabash River, or burst that infernal river to everlasting smash in the attempt."

"I have always thought," said Wheeler, "that the administration should have devoted itself assiduously to the catching and eating of fish. What the administration needed above all things was brain food."

"It is true," said Sherman reflectively, "that our administration lost Florida, South Carolina and Louisiana from the Republican fold; that we have somewhat muddled the Fortune Bay matter and the Cuban claims, and that we have made civil service reform a laughing stock; but, after a gigantic effort, we kicked Cornell and Arthur out of the Custom-house. There's glory for you."

How it Looks Across the Water.

[From the London Daily News, June 25.]

In fixing on General Hancock the Democrats have shown their usual sagacity. Though in a certain sense a Southern politician, he is not a Southern man. Though one of General Grant's most effectual helps in the suppression of the rebellion and the restoration of the Union, he has always opposed his policy of coercion. His distinguished career and services will probably gain him support in some of the doubtful Northern States. General Hancock hails from Pennsylvania. Senator Bayard came next, and his personal qualities would have made him a dignified Chief Magistrace of the United States.

Who Assisted Hancock?

[From the N. O. Democrat.]

The truth is, Gen. Hancock's orders and letters all emanated from himself, with the assistance of a most accomplished secretary, the chief of his staff, a gentleman of thorough knowledge of law and government.

MUCH VIRTUE IN "IF."

Were I the strong green grass,
And your's the Daisy's crest
Of gold, and snowy breast—
And it should come to pass
That for the grass you heard
Me passionately sue
For Daisy's love from you,
And listened—in a word,
If you loved me and I loved you—

Ah, sweet! my blades should lie
Against your dewy lips
Till your white petal tips
Blushed crimson as the sky;
And, kissed from pink to red,
Your lips should smile anew,
As dawns of rosy hue
To summer days are wed—
If you loved me and I loved you!

THE BLOODY SHIRT.

A Local Fight Made on Gen. Marmaduke for His War Record.

Republicans Working for Crittenden on a Trade to Affect the Congressional Campaign.

[From the St. Louis Times of Thursday.]

As the time draws near for the holding of primaries to select delegates to the State Convention increased activity is observed among the local politicians and men who are supposed to carry the votes of their respective wards in their pockets. This is particularly true of the men who are "running things" in the city in the interest of Colonel Crittenden, candidate for Governor.

Mr. R. D. Lancaster, assisted by Ed. Butler, Walter C. Carr and others, is engineering the Crittenden boom, and a Times reporter was yesterday informed that they had their plans laid to capture the city for their champion. The Times reporter's informant stated that the Crittenden workers had selected their men in each ward for delegates, and that they were determined to have them chosen. It is a well-known fact that the great mass of the people in the city desire to see Gen. Marmaduke nominated for Governor, and this fact appears to have spurred the Crittenden supporters to extraordinary exertions. An argument used by the Crittenden supporters is that, General Marmaduke having served in the Confederate army, his nomination would affect the national ticket, as the people of the North would say Missouri still insists on placing in office her "brigadiers" in preference to men who were loyal to the Government. They appear to be extremely desirous of making the bloody shirt an issue in the campaign, and the more effectively to accomplish this, they are combining with the Republicans and agreeing to assist them in electing one or more Republicans to Congress in the fall. All through the strategic movements now in operation, the wily Rosenblatt figures conspicuously. With the success of Crittenden he expects to ride into Congress. The Crittenden men, it is said, are forming union leagues in all parts of the city, the members of which are composed of Republicans and deluded Democrats. Gen. Marmaduke's friends have carefully avoided raising any bloody shirt issue, and desire to make the canvass on the merits of the respective candidates only, but the supporters of Col. Crittenden are evidently alarmed at the popularity of General Marmaduke and fear to trust the result to legitimate means. It is believed, however, that General Marmaduke's conservative course will defeat the plans entered into by the disaffected Democrats and the wily Republicans, who hope by the combinations to get Rosenblatt and possibly one other Republican Congressman.

The report is current on the streets that, in case Crittenden becomes Governor, R. D. Lancaster is to be one of the Police Commissioners.

There are numberless rumors on the street as to the secret efforts being made by Col. Crittenden's supporters to secure his nomination, and it behooves the friends of Gen. Marmaduke, and of Gen. Hockaday as well, to be on the alert and see that the will of the true Democrats, the Democrats that refuse to enter into combinations that may result in the election of Republican Congressmen from the city of St. Louis, is not defeated.

GENERAL HANCOCK.

Judge Black Ignorant of Order No. 40 Until It was Promulgated.

NEW YORK, July 8.—The following cablegram was received here last night:

LONDON, July 7.—I am not the author of Gen. Hancock's letters or orders concerning Louisiana. I knew nothing of them until they were printed. J. BLACK.

A CARD FROM HANCOCK.

Gen Hancock has received nearly 5,000 letters and telegrams since his nomination. The Star publishes to-day a card from Hancock, as follows:

GOVERNOR'S ISLAND, NEW YORK HARBOR, July 6.—To Whom it May Concern: I am late in responding to the kind notes and telegrams. My correspondence, personal and official, at all times being heavy, has been immensely increased lately. I am not able at present to respond promptly and fully to all of the welcome greetings extended to me. I hope unavoidable delay will not be mistaken for indifference or neglect.

The truth is I have not heretofore realized how many there are in the land who feel kindly toward me personally, and who espouse the cause in which I have been so conspicuously honored. In delaying my acknowledgments I beg the forbearance of my friends, and of my most intimate friends I venture to ask the most in this regard. Thanking you most heartily for your congratulations and for your kind letters, I am truly your friend,

WINFIELD S. HANCOCK.

Who Shall Be Governor?

[From To-Day's Amerika.]

The day approaches on which the Democratic State Convention of Missouri has to nominate its ticket. But a nomination by the State Convention, according to the present situation here, means election. Therefore, it is no wonder that general attention is turned to the candidates for the Governorship.

With the exception of various less prominent office-seekers like John Walker, of Boone county, and D. B. McClellan, of Lafayette county, three men stand in the foreground in regard to the nomination for the Governorship, Thomas T. Crittenden, of Warrensburg, John A. Hockaday, of the kingdom of Callaway and, Gen. John Marmaduke, of St. Louis.

Thomas T. Crittenden was born in Kentucky. He is a nephew of the celebrated Whig leader John. J. Crittenden, who was thrice United States Senator, twice United States Attorney-General and once Governor of Kentucky.

Young Thomas was sent by his mother to Centre College at Danville, which is under the direction of the Presbyterians. Having completed his studies there he devoted himself to the practice of law, and established himself as an attorney at Lexington, Mo.

When the civil war broke out he espoused the cause of the Union, and as Colonel commanded a militia regiment. In 1856 he removed to Warrensburg, Johnson county, Mo., and formed a law partnership with the present Senator Francis M. Cockrell. This excited some stir: for Cockrell had been a Confederate General. In spite of that, or rather on account of it, the two partners did a thriving business.

Although born under strong Whig influences Crittenden was always a Democrat. The first political position which he obtained was that of Congressman for the Seventh District of Missouri. His first "term" in this business began in 1872 and his second in 1876.

The estimable John A. Hockaday, who resides at Fulton, Callaway county, took the part of the South in the war. In 1874 he was elected Attorney-General of Missouri on the Hardin ticket. Four years later his constituents sent him to the State's Senate. He played a prominent, if not generally approved, part in the Glover and Vest contest. Celsus Price is, it is said, one of his most active friends.

The third chief candidate is our brave Marmaduke. If he has not particularly distinguished himself as General on the side of the secession States or as Railroad Commissioner, he still has many friends.

If we have to say which of these three men we consider the best to be the banner-bearer of the Missouri Democracy in the approaching campaign, and later to be Governor of our State, we say: Crittenden.

The Times of this city is wrong when it flaunts the bloody shirt or the alleged sympathy of Republicans for Crittenden in the campaign. We are not opposed to Gen. Marmaduke because he was a Confederate; neither does the same reason weigh with regard to Mr. Hockaday.

The decisive question appears to us rather to be: Which of the three candidates offers the best proof, from his former political career, that he will wield the highest executive power of our State honestly and capably?

He who knows the conditions here and is able in a measure to judge unprejudiced will certainly answer this question in the same manner as we did above.

DANCING.

Not dance? Just take her hand in yours
In an easy, friendly way,
And glide along, with noiseless feet,
At the closing hour of day.
Just let a soft tress of her hair
Blow lightly o'er your cheek,
Your heart will beat and pulses thrill
With the words you cannot speak.
Not dance? Why every hour is worth
Its weight in solid gold.
Each step is freighted with the joy
Of a happiness untold!
Why speak of dancing as a sin,
Because of Herod's daughter?
In fabled days the sirens sang
Deep down below the water,
And drew men to an ocean grave
By the beauty of their lays.
Yet no one tells us not to sing
Some heavenly hymn of praise.
For God above has made us all
To share all pleasures sweet,
Whether it be by tuneful words
Or the movement of our feet.

VEILED PROPHETS.

Preliminary Announcement of the Forthcoming Pageant.

Official announcement is being disseminated through the country that, regardless of labor and expense, these benefactors of American civilization will, on Tuesday, October 5, 1880, offer to an expectant and enraptured public their third annual nocturnal illustrated pageant, which will surpass in grandeur, beauty and magnificence all spectacular exhibitions heretofore displayed upon the streets of any American city. No description can convey any approximate idea of the dazzling and instructive effects of these gorgeous tableaux, which must be seen to be appreciated, and when once witnessed, will constitute a dream of splendor to be emblazoned in the memory forever.

This exhibition as usual will terminate with a ball, to which distinguished visitors obtain free tickets only, and no amount of money can buy admission.

In the mysterious den of the Prophets, artists, armorers and artisans are already working by day and night in preparation of the great display. Woe to the prying human who seeks to surreptitiously obtain information as to the nature of a display which will be the marvel of the century. He is sure to be detected, and the invariable custom of the keepers of the portals is to throw the miscreants to be devoured by two ferocious tigers from the royal jungles.

CHASING A BURGLAR.

A Lady Discovers a Thief in Her Bedroom—A Desperate Run.

About 3 o'clock this morning Mrs. Carpenter, living at 911 Chouteau avenue, was awakened by hearing some one moving in her bed-room. She cried for assistance, and then saw a man run out of the room and down stairs, whence he escaped through an open window. Some policemen who had heard Mrs. Carpenter's screams visited the house and with Mrs. Carpenter's assistance made an examination, when they discovered that a set of gold jewelry, consisting of a pin and two ear drops, worth $25, a gold chain worth $30 and $2 in currency had been stolen. Then the officers instituted search for the burglar, and some forty-five minutes after the burglary Policeman Worcester found a negro with bare feet standing in the alley to the rear of Mrs. Carpenter's home. On approaching the negro the latter started on a run. He was pursued to the corner of Catalpa street and Chouteau avenue, the officer repeatedly firing at him on the way, and then he rushed into a yard and escaped. On his road to the police station Worcester found a black alpaca coat, a woolen shirt, a vest and a gingham shirt, which he supposes had been dropped by the thief whom he had been chasing.

A Small Blaze.

About 12:30 last night the one-story brick building, 1421 Carondelet avenue, received some $200 damage from fire. It belongs to the Parks estate, and was insured for $200 in the Jefferson. About $200 worth of tools and carpenter material, belonging to John Alb, who occupied the house, was totally destroyed.

PASSED AFTER ALL.

A Circular of Interest to Unsuccessful High School Applicants.

The following self-explanatory circular was this morning mailed to seventy-five of the pupils of the public schools who at the last examination failed to "pass" to the High School:

SUPERINTENDENT'S OFFICE, ST. LOUIS, July 10.—The Teachers' Committee have adopted a new rule which reads as follows, to-wit:

The class-standing during the last two quarters prior to the written examination for admission to the Branch High and Central High Schools shall be taken into consideration in deciding whether a pupil has passed the examination of admission, and this class-standing in each study shall be arranged equally with the per cent obtained in that study in the written examination for admission.

Pupils who thus obtain forty per cent as a minimum in each study and a general average in all the studies of sixty per cent shall be considered as having successfully passed the examinations and shall be entitled to admission.

I have carefully examined into the per cents showing your class-standing as reported to me by your principal and find that you are entitled to admission to the High School according to the above rule. Please present this official notice to Mr. ——, Principal of the High School, in September. Very respectfully,

D. W. TEUTEBERG,

MORNING BOARD FUTURES.

Wheat—Lower and irregular. The market broke as soon as there was evidence of a return of fair weather. Prices at first fell off two or three cents a bushel, and at one time it looked like a grand tumble, but a considerable reaction took place and closing prices were stronger and better. Cash opened with 98c bid, was offered at 98⅞, then sold at 98, advanced and sold at 99, went ⅛ higher and closed at 99; July opened at 93¾c, fell to 91c, then rallied and sold at 92c, but fell off to 91c at the close; August opened at 89½c, fell to 88⅜c and closed still lower at 87c; September opened at 90c and closed with 88c asked and 87⅝c bid; year opened at 89c, sold at 87⅞c, was offered later at 87¾. No. 3 red sold at 90c, and 90⅛c was bid for the east side. Rejected 72½c bid and offered at 74c.

Corn—Firm but inactive, with buyers and sellers too far apart to do much business. Cash sold at 34½, but there were few offerings at any figure. July 34½ bid and no offerings; August sold at 34 and closed with the same bid and 34⅛c asked; September sold at 34; year sold at 30½ and closed with 30 bid and 30⅛ asked. No. 2 white-mixed cash sold at 39; July 37½ bid and 37¾ asked; rejected corn sold at 33.

Oats—Weak and a shade lower; cash sold at 24½; July bid 23⅝c, and offered at 23⅞c; August sold at 21⅞c; September 21½c bid, and offered at 21⅞c; year 20⅛c bid.

Rye—Dull and neglected. Cash 65c bid and offered at 72c. Rejected 50c bid and offered at 75c.

Pork—Dull and inactive, with prices about the same as yesterday. Cash was offered at $13 75, and $13 50 bid. It may be quoted at $13 50@13 65. July was offered at 13.85 and 13.90 was asked for August, but no sales could be effected at these figures.

Lard—Nominal at 6.75.

Dry Salt Meats—Spiritless and nominal. Shoulders are held at 7.65; clear rib at 7.10; clear at 7.40.

Bacon—Firm and unchanged. Shoulders may be quoted at 5⅛c, clear ribs at 8⅛c and clear at 8⅜c.

CATTLE—The receipts were scant and mainly of grass natives and Texans. The latter grades found sale to local speculators and the canners at unchanged prices. To say the least, there was not much of an inquiry, and the few buyers present were not greatly disappointed at the small offerings. The few sales made were not worth mentioning. The prospects ahead are not very flattering as regards prices, but values will not depreciate much on any grade except perhaps on grass natives. Fair to good corn-fed native steers will remain steady, and the run of grass Texans and Indians will be large. Ruling quotations weak.

BY THE SEA.

At dawn I look on the open sea.
Cold and gray as the face of death,
Waiting the warmth of the sun, God's breath,
It rolls and moans unceasingly.

How like the wails of humanity
Are the groans that echo its heaving breast,
Surging up from the deep unrest,
That goeth on to Eternity!

I watch, and lo! there are golden bars,
Blending with crimson, as up they rise,
Kindling a fire athwart the skies
That dims the light of the brightest stars.

Out of the gloom of the waters leap
All the glories of brightest beam,
Flooding the earth with a golden stream,
Flashing upon the face of the deep.

Gone are the shadows so cold and gray,
That gave to the sea its face of gloom,
And upfrom its bosom the white sails loom
Like the wings of angels soaring away,

While waves that break on the sandy shore;
Seem cheerily changing their sad refrain,
And softly attuned to a sweeter strain
The deep-voiced echoes sigh no more.

My heart, which painfully seemed to thrill,
Now quickened beats with warmth anew,
And for the life I must journey through
Has taken fresh courage for every ill.

An unknown sea I must pass some day;
May I hope for the golden bars
And the light that has dimmed the stars,
Though I cross in the cold and gray?

GENERAL AND MRS. HANCOCK.

A Louisville Lady's Recollections of Them, and of Mrs. Hancock's Girlhood—A True and Beautiful Woman.

To the Editor of the Courier-Journal:

The chandeliers of one of the most hospitable and fashionable houses in Louisville were shedding their soft radiance over an elegant assemblage of young ladies, married ladies and several gentlemen. The lady of this house is well known and universally popular, belongs to an old and well-established family, and is always a welcome visitor in the best circles of Louisville society. From a casual remark I discovered that she was an acquaintance of Mrs. Hancock, the wife of Maj.-Gen. W. S. Hancock, the nominee of the Democratic party for the Presidency.

"Mrs. O., you knew Mrs. Hancock personally, I believe?" I said.

"Yes; knew her in St. Louis when she was a young lady, and after wards when she was married to Lieut. Hancock," she replied.

"What was her maiden name?"

"She was Miss Elmira Russell, and lived at St. Louis with her mother in a large double house, exactly similar to the house of Mrs. Shreve and Mr. D. P. Faulds here in Louisville. And the condition of the family was very similar in many respects. Mrs. Russell occupying one-half of the house and her sister, Mrs. Bennett, the other: and on fete and reception days and gala occasions the communicating doors were thrown open and their handsome parlors thrown into one. And this was often done, as they were noted for their hospitality and elegant living. They were people of considerable wealth, and although Mrs. Bennett was the wealthier of the two, nevertheless Mrs. Russell was perhaps more popular and her entertainments as largely attended, and always by the haut ton of St. Louis society. Perhaps the personal charms of Miss Elmira Russell contributed largely to the attractions of her mother's house."

"What was the style of Miss Russell when you knew her as a girl?"

"She was tall and graceful in all her movements, a decided blonde and remarkably pretty. Her manners were chaste and elegant, of the unexceptionable 'form or style' of the high-bred Virginia or Kentucky lady of thirty years ago. She was a lovely girl, and almost universally admired and, I would add, she was as much beloved as admired, because she possessed qualities of heart that far outweighed the great personal beauty that distinguished her. As I said before, her 'form, or style' was very distingue, elegant and self-poised. There was nothing—not even the semblance or shadow of vulgar 'push'—nothing of the swell dash so much affected in later years by the pushing parvenus that elbow their neighbors out, while they push themselves in. She seemed even then to be conscious of being born to a higher destiny. I loved her very much then, and have cherished the most pleasant recollections of her ever since those happy days of girlhood."

"Was Gen. Hancock as handsome as his bride?" I asked.

"Yes; he was superb; his figure slight, graceful and perfectly molded. His face was exceedingly handsome, and he possessed an air of noble manhood that was very captivating. They were the handsomest couple I ever saw, and it was then very often remarked: 'What a handsome couple is Lieut. Hancock and wife.'"

"What was his rank at that time?"

"He was a Lieutenant and the Aid of the commanding officer stationed at St. Louis. He was even then noted for his gallant, soldierly bearing, and was immensely popular with the best young men of the city, the jeunesse doree, who are now solid, substantial men of capital and influence in St. Louis. Mrs. Hancock was married a few years before me, and I remember well how society dwelt with rapture upon her beauty, her accomplishments and her splendid bridal toilet. Her wedding was the sensation in the city, and no doubt there are many yet living who remember some of the recherche articles that helped to make up and complete that fairy-like dress. I say she was popular; she was beautiful; she was a good 'mixer,' as the word goes in society, but she was totally devoid of the slencanailler that is so detestable in mixed and general communities. It seemed that as a girl she was always surrounded with an atmosphere of purity, which I hear with pleasure has followed her to the later years of her life. She has made a good mother and a loving, trusting wife, and as far as I ever heard no whisper of scandal has ever attached to her name."

"Mrs. O., do you remember anything about her early religious life? Do you know to what church she was attached, or whether she was a communicant of any church whatever?"

"Well, in those days, we were a happy, thoughtless set of young girls and did not think much about such things. We said our daily prayers at our mothers' knees, and attached more importance to such devotions than to the more ostentatious duties of going to church and listening to wailing litanies and gorgeous rituals. But this I do know, that Mrs. Russell's family attended services at the church of the Rev. Dr. Potts, a Presbyterian. This fact is notorious; and she was reared under Presbyterian influences; but perhaps she was not then a communicant. After she married Lieut. Hancock she became a regular attendant, with her husband, at the Episcopal Church, and I have no cause to suppose that she has ever left that church. She was devotedly attached to her husband, and as a dutiful, loving wife, I believe that she is an Episcopalian. I never heard the question mooted until within the last few days."

"Well, do you trust the stories that are circulating that Mrs. Hancock is a Catholic?"

"Suppose she is—whose business is it? Has she not as many rights as the humblest of our citizens to serve God as she pleases? Does not our Constitution guarantee to all the privilege of freedom of religious opinion? Suppose she is a Catholic, or suppose she is not; who will dare assail her on such a question? It is disgusting to see religion pushed into politics; it is fanaticism; it is madness; and if Mrs. Hancock chooses to be a Catholic, a Presbyterian, a Methodist, or even a Campbellite, it is her business, and nobody's else under the sun. She has the Constitution of her country to shield her. But, as I said before, she was raised under Presbyterian influence, like myself, and, if I mistake not, was married by a Presbyterian clergyman, and she is now an Episcopalian: and even so no one has a right to challenge her on this question. She has the right to be what God has given her grace to be, and it is her private affair. The story of her affiliation with the Roman Catholic Church I disbelieve and contemn as a new-fangled invention of the sensational sort. I repeat again, that Elmira Russell was a good, pure girl, beloved by all who knew her, was a good mother and had her fond, loving heart wrung to misery by the death of her lovely and only daughter. She is a devoted wife and a patriotic woman, and will do honor to any station to which she may be called."

THE "WENTWORTH,"

NEWCASTLE, N. H.

This Hotel will open June 25. It has accommodations for 400 guests, and offers more attractions for pleasure and comfort than any other seaside resort in the country. Its high situation affords beautiful views, both inland and seaward; its healthful atmosphere, the easy manner in which it can be reached, its advantages for boating, bathing and fishing, excellent drives and attractive walks, all combine to make it one of the most charming places on the coast of New England.

Since last year extensive additions have been made, among them one hundred and fifty sleeping rooms, a spacious Music Hall for dancing, theatricals and concerts, Bowling Alleys, Billiard Room, a passenger elevator operated by steam, a large and commodious stable for private equipages, the grounds lighted by the electric light, steam yacht for excursions, etc., etc.

The temperature of the bathing at the "Wentworth" is especially inviting to those unable to endure the shock incident to more exposed localities. An enclosed body of salt water, covering an area of fifty acres, affords a safe and pleasant place for boating at all times for ladies and children. The drives to the neighboring beaches and other points of attraction in this vicinity are unsurpassed. The veranda, fifteen feet in width, surrounding the House, gives an extended promenade of over 1,000 feet in length, while the view is unexcelled in beauty and grandeur.

An orchestra of twenty selected musicians, under the direction of Mr. John J. Braham, has been engaged for the season.

The House is furnished throughout in black walnut, has the best of beds, its sleeping rooms are of ample size, well ventilated, and from all sides of the House afford fine views. Its cuisine will be found of an unexceptionable character. The "Wentworth" is situated three miles from Portsmouth, N. H., in the ancient town of Newcastle, and is reached from Boston in two hours' ride over the Eastern Railroad. Address

THE MYSTIC ORDERS.

Doings in the Various Lodges During the Past Week.

Masons, Odd Fellows, Foresters, Knights of Honor, United Workmen, Knights of Pythias—Miscellaneous.

No unusual degree of activity has been noticed among the orders of secrecy in St. Louis during the week just ended. The principal work transacted among the lodges was the installation of the officers elect and compiling reports of the business done in the month of June. The annual statements of the various societies throughout the country are now being received by the subordinate lodges, and show all of them to be in a sound condition.

Masonic.

At the last communication of Corner Stone Lodge, No. 323, work was done in some of the degrees.

The officers of the Masonic Board of Relief met last night, but no business of a public character was transacted.

Tuscan Lodge, No. 360, at a regular communication Tuesday evening had work for new members in the second degree.

Last Tuesday evening the membership of West Gate Lodge, No. 445, worked in the E. A. degrees, and had a large attendance of visitors.

Keystone Lodge, No. 243, at a called session on Wednesday evening worked in the degree second, and there was a large attendance of visiting members.

At the last session of St. Aldemar Commandery, No. 18, there was work on the Temple order, one of the most beautiful, impressive and complicated degress of Masonry.

Mr. William H. Mayow, Grand Master of Missouri, leaves this week for Chicago, where he goes to make arrangements with the hotels for the St. Louis members of the order who are going to attend the Masonic convention there next month.

Last Thursday evening Napthali Lodge, No. 25, had their room crowded with visitors, and worked in the beautiful degree of the E. A. The Worshipful Master, Geo. Pierce, was present and conducted the ceremonies. The same work is on the docket for their next session.

Independent Order of Odd Fellows.

Germania Lodge, No. 56, will celebrate the fortieth anniversary of their organization on the 26th. This is recognized as the oldest lodge in Missouri, and has among its membership some of our best citizens.

Last Tuesday evening the officials of Cosmos Lodge, No. 196, put several new candidates through the grand ceremonies of the initiatory degree, and the lodge room was crowded with visitors to witness the beautiful services.

The design of the beautiful monument to be placed in the Odd Fellows' lot at Bellefontaine Cemetery was finished yesterday and taken off in photograph and oil colors. On the base of the monument is a representation of the holy Bible, and the three links and eye of liberty worked in a large wreath of roses, above which is the motto of the order, "Love, Friendship and Charity," and on the top is a vast globe.

The Ancient Foresters.

Arrangements are now being made to institute a new court at East St. Louis.

An import of regalia will be received this week from England for the members of courts in this city and State.

The delegates to the Right Worthy High Court of the World, which begins its annual session in New York City next month, have all been elected, and leave St. Louis the last of this month.

E. M. McMurtry, Permanent Secretary, and John Waters, Chief Ranger of America, are winding up their affairs in St. Louis preparatory to leaving for New York City the 1st of August, where they will be located for the next two years.

United Workmen.

This State had only one assessment in June, and has a membership of 6,000.

Frederick H. Bacon, of Covington Lodge, and editor of the Overseer, is back from the East.

A new lodge with a charter membership of forty-five was instituted at Labelle, Mo., this week.

The officers recently elected to serve in Answell Lodge were duly installed at last Tuesday evening's session.

The city lodges still progress "onward and upward," applications being received for membership at each meeting.

Dr. W. C. Richardson, Grand Recorder of State, this week paid out $2,000 to Mrs. Lindsley as an endowment on the death of her husband.

Enterprise Lodge had a very interesting session Thursday evening, work being done in the degrees, and there was a large attendance of visitors.

The hot weather is having a depressing effect upon the attendance at the different lodges, and only such work as is required to be carried out is attended to.

The German constitutions with the amendments as adopted at the last session of the Grand Lodge are now being distributed to the German Courts.

At the last session of Globe Lodge, No. 54, the members enjoyed one of the most interesting times that they had during the summer season, and the officers recently elected were duly installed.

Jefferson Lodge, 196, at its last meeting met in their new hall, Ninth and Franklin avenue, and worked in the various degrees of the order. The new hall is one of the best furnished in the city.

Mr. H. N. Berry has just received the appointment as chairman of the Supreme Lodge Committee on Laws and Supervision. Mr. Berry has just closed his second year's service as Supreme Recorder of this order.

Knights of Honor.

A new lodge is in course of formation at St. Joseph, this State, which will shortly be instituted with a large membership.

Monday night the new officers of the Olive Branch Lodge, No. 812, will be duly installed and social entertainment will close the evening's meeting.

Last Wednesday evening Seymour Lodge, No. 118, installed their officers, after which the members and their friends enjoyed a pleasant social entertainment among themselves.

The annual official statement just issued by the Supreme Treasurer shows over $2,500,000 paid out in endowments, which, of course, does not include the moneys paid out for relief, etc.

Friday night Bremen Lodge, No. 254, had a rousing session at their new hall, Broadway and Salisbury street, and worked in the mystic degree. On the rolls of this lodge will be found the names of our most substantial citizens.

At the last meeting of Anchor Lodge, No. 144, the following officers were installed to serve the ensuing six months: Dictator, Adolph Dietz; vice-dictator, F. Handley; reporter, W. O. Life, and Treasurer, A. Kilpatrick.

Knights of Pythias.

James Russell, of Cavalier Lodge, Belleville, Ill., was in the city during the week on business connected with the order.

Brilliant Division, No. 4, uniformed rank, has engaged the famous Arsenal Band for the grand entertainment in August.

Hon. James A. Carnaham, Grand Chancellor of Indiana, was here during the week, and arranged quarters at the Laclede Hotel for his uniformed divisions.

Red Cross Division, No. 4, uniformed rank, have ordered a beautiful regulation Division flag from James Pettibone, of Cincinnati. It will cost $175, and be sent here early next week.

Germania Lodge, No. 7, has twenty-five members waiting to have the page rank conferred upon them. A part of them will go through the interesting ceremony at the next session of the lodge.

St. Louis, No. 7, has a movement on foot which will, when accomplished, be quite a surprise to the membership. The officers have now under consideration the adoption of the amplified third degree.

The petitions now being circulated for the opening of three new lodges in the city are being rapidly filled out, and last Saturday one was forwarded to Washington to receive authority to open a new lodge at once.

Mound City Tent, No. 219, last Tuesday evening had its most interesting session of the season. The excellent Commander of State was present, and reviewed the members, after which the new officers were duly installed. Next Monday night the officers and members will visit McGloghlin Tent in a body.

Knights of St. John.

Aside from the direct membership this organization is but little known to the public. The strength of the order, according to official authority, is nearly 2,000, and constantly increasing, which speaks well for an order scarcely out of its first year. Each member is subject to uniform and the laws of the Roman Catholic Church, which they pledge themselves to assist in all of its undertakings. The principal object of the order, however, is to create and foster a feeling of fraternity and fellowship among the various commanderies of Roman Catholic Knights throughout the nation, and to aid and assist in alleviating the suffering of members who are by sickness or other misfortunes unable to pursue their usual vocations, and their motto is "Love, Honor and Valor."

Miscellaneous Jottings.

Charters will shortly be granted to ten new lodges of the Odd Fellows that have been organized in the State.

The troubles between the United Order of Treu Bund in this and Illinois State as to which should rule, which caused a separation of the lodges in each State, was settled this week, Mr. G. H. Brockmeyer, of this city, being declared the ruler of both States.

Drowned in a Creek.

Harry Brasfield, a young man living near Bailey's Station, on the Iron Mountain Road, in Jefferson county, was drowned in the creek near the iron bridge, last evening, while bathing a horse. The deceased was but 22 years of age, and a young man of good qualities that rendered him popular among all who knew him. He formerly lived in Springfield, Ill.

"And the Leaves were for the Healing of the Nations."

This is fully exemplified in the demonstration that so common a pasture weed as smart-weed, or water-pepper, possesses medicinal properties which, when combined with essence of Jamaica ginger and other efficacious vegetable extracts, as in Dr. Pierce's Compound Extract of Smart-Weed, constitutes a most potent remedy for bowel affections like diarrhœa, dysentery, flux, etc. It is also an efficacious medicine for colds, and to break up fevers and inflammatory attacks, and for the alleviation of pain. Every family should keep a supply of it. Fifty cents by druggists.

AMUSEMENTS.

Uhrig's Cave.

The present has been the most successful week, both financially and artistically, that Messrs. Collins & Short have had during the summer season at Uhrig's Cave. Miles' Juvenile Opera Company is an excellent organization. Many of the children possess decided talent, and all of them have been well trained. Their voices are fresh and pleasing, and they have acquitted themselves admirably in their rendering of "The Little Duke." Lecocq's opera will be given this evening and to-morrow (Sunday) evening, for the last time. On Monday "Pinafore" will be revived, with the following cast, which is the original juvenile one:

Sir Joseph Porter, K. C. B., Miss Fannie Brough; Captain, Master Ike Lasker; Ralph, Miss Fannie Cohen; Dick Deadeye, Master R. N. Fox; Boatswain, Master L. Sloman; Josephine, Miss Sallie Cohen; Little Buttercup, Miss Fannie Tilton; Hebe, Miss Josie Gamel.

HE CROAKED.

An Unknown Man Dies in the Pinafore Saloon this Morning.

"Where is the corpse?" asked a reporter of Officer McCarthy at the Pinafore Saloon this morning.

"There," said the policeman, pointing to a figure in a chair with a newspaper thrown over its head, and a general air of drunk, but not disorderly, about it.

"Do you mean to say that man is dead?" and, stepping up to the chair, the reporter jerked the paper away, revealing the squalid outlines of the dead. A legion of flies had insinuated themselves under the paper, and they paid no attention to its sudden withdrawal, simply going on with their obscene revel. The dead man was very old; seventy years probably had grizzled his thin hair and scanty beard. His face was strongly marked; the nose being broken gave him a singular appearance. He was dressed in a faded and stained suit, grease-spotted and crinkly at the knees, threadbare at the elbows, and his shirt was by no means immaculate. The shiny shoes at one end contrasted strongly with the unkempt, unshorn appearance at the other. He evidently was a tramp, and his death will be regretted by no one.

Turning to the barkeeper, Will Meyers, the reporter asked how the death occurred, and Bill took up the narrative with a garniture of oaths and expletives that would have done infinite credit to Scotty Briggs in his unregenerate days. "Well," said he, "the cully dropped in about 6:32 1-4 this a. m. and sachayed over to that stool he's a campin' on now. He kind a took in the sitiwation and raps his valise on the table. 'What d'ye want?' ses I, and he grunted out some'h'n about Catawba. I fixed him up a glass, and he forked over the lucre and I let him alone a spell. Putty soon," continued Bill, after a short pause for expectorating purposes, "putty soon he was a hammerin' the table ag'in and p'intin' to the ice chest. 'Beer?' ses I, and that fetched him for he nodded like a blessed old factotum. When he got outside of that beer he fetched a couple of long breaths and let his head fall on his hand. Then I went to washing the windows, and he never stirred till I got round to where he was. I told him to move, but he wouldn't, and so I got down and began to help him. As soon as I hitched onto him I see what was the matter, and sung out to Fritz, 'Hi, Fritz, the son of a b——h has croaked right here in the chair,' and Fritz Kein and me summoned the officers, and that's all I know about it."

Nobody appears to know the dead man's name. He has been loafing about the Pinafore saloon, and also Kelly's saloon, on Sixth and Christy avenue, but he is evidently a stranger in the city, and one young man named Slipsky who was present claims that the deceased was a furniture dealer on Bieuville street, New Orleans. He was evidently very poor, and his destination will be the Potter's Field. His name will probably be developed at the Coroner's inquest this evening.

NORTH ST. LOUIS LOCALS.

Mr. Louis Seyfardt returned yesterday evening from a trip through the Western States.

The directors of the Social Turner Hall will meet Monday night to vote upon the question of adding improvements to the hall.

Yesterday evening Mr. Leonard Ainsley contracted for a large tract of land near the river front and Bremen avenue, and in a few days will start a lumber yard there, thus extending the business interests of North St. Louis.

Prof. Reared is making arrangements to deliver a series of artistic lectures and will exhibit scenes of Palestine, Rome, and other places of note in sacred history, the proceeds of which will be paid to the Ladies' Aid Society. A robbery is reported at the Mehlville post-office, the thieves getting away with a good supply of stamps, cigars and a few dollars in cash.

And now comes Edward Coyle with $500, which he is anxious to stake on the election of Hancock. Somebody ought to accommodate both Coyle and Eagan to make the campaign interesting in this section.

The funeral of the unfortunate John O'Keefe was very largely attended yesterday, the line of carriages and other vehicles being an unusually long one for this part of the city. He leaves a wife and one child, having been married only eighteen months.

Olive Branch Lodge, No. 319, Knights and Ladies of Honor, at the regular meeting installed the following officers for the ensuing term: Mrs. F. D. Baldwin, protector; Mrs. Mary Kilpatrick, vice-protector; Mrs. Mary C. Warbel, secretary and financial secretary, Mrs. Susan Kilpatrick, treasurer; Miss Annie Barnum, chaplain; Miss Florence Westerman, guide; Miss Emma Palmer, guardian; Thomas Worley, sentinel. By this it will be seen that the Olive Branch Lodge is thoroughly grounded in the idea of woman's rights and their capability to hold office as, all the positions are filled by ladies with one exception. The lodge was instituted only a few weeks ago, but its affairs are in a flourishing condition and the membership such as will soon place it in the first rank of lodges of this character.

St. Louis as a Coffee Market.

[From the Comercio Del Valle.]

The importance of St. Louis as a coffee market is hardly realized by the trade generally, and few retailers of this staple are aware that the receipts in this city for the year 1879 amounted to 267,533 bags, or nearly one-eighth of the estimated production of Brazil.

The following statistics of receipts in St. Louis from January, 1874, to January, 1879, show an increase in the coffee business, and in the near future St. Louis will probably rank as the largest distributing point on the globe:

	Receipts. Bags.
1874	158,918
1875	166,914
1876	190,543
1877	197,099
1878	201,080
1879	267,533

The successful construction of the New Orleans jetties offers increased facilities for the transportation of Rio coffees to St. Louis in preference to New York, on account of the vast saving in freight, and should the Mississippi Valley and Brazil Steamship Company—a St. Louis organization, incorporated for the purpose of providing a direct trade between the Mississippi Valley and Brazil—obtain the mail service subsidy which they solicit from the Government, it is safe to predict that St. Louis, from the natural advantages of her position as a supply market for the vast territory between the two great mountain ranges of the continent, must become the leading coffee depot of the United States.

Again, should the Mexico Central Railway be prosecuted to completion, another, and—from our nearer relation—more valuable source of revenue will be laid at our feet. Mexican coffees are rapidly growing in favor with consumers, and increased attention is being paid to their production by Mexican planters. Mexico consequently will eventually prove a formidable rival to Brazil in her exports of this article. She will at least force the Brazilian Government to lower her export tariff, which at present constitutes a large portion of her revenue. At the present writing several of the leading St. Louis houses are carrying handsome lines of Mexican coffees, which are commanding relatively higher prices than Rios.

Temperance Notes.

The usual Gospel Temperance meeting will be held in the shady grounds of the St. Louis Sanitarium, 2017 Cass avenue, to-morrow, Sunday afternoon, at 3 o'clock, conducted by P. D. Cordell. Laurie, Dr. Thomas Hostetter and others will entertain the audience with short addresses. Comfortable seats will be provided and all are invited. The Seventh street cars going north pass the grounds.

Iron Mountain Route.

Sunday Excursion Train July 11, 1880, will leave Depot, corner Main and Plum streets, 8:40 a. m., stopping at all stations between St. Louis and Arcadia, returning to St. Louis at 7:25 p. m. O. W. RUGGLES, General Pass. Agent.

SPORTING.

Boating Notes.

Ellis Ward, of Philadelphia, is making new oars for the Blue and Tan boys.

The Western and Mississippi Club give a joint picnic at Bodeman's Grove to-morrow.

Wm. Keller, the well-known stroke, is taking his daily practice in a single scull and will have a new paper shell this fall.

In all the races of the National Amateur Rowing Association where Western men have entered they have won brilliant victories.

Cousland, Campbell, Stumpf and Assman, and Taylor, Green, George and Allen are the two four-oared crews who will enter for the championship of the Modoc Club.

F. Mumford, of New Orleans, the champion amateur single sculler, is expected to pass through St. Louis about the 20th, and should the water be in proper condition he will give an exhibition pull. Modoc Club-house will be his headquarters.

Plans have been made for a boat-house to be erected by the Modoc Club at Creve Cœur Lake. Operations will be begun as soon as the tracks of the narrow gauge road are laid. A fleet of sailing and pleasure boats will be added to the already large number of race-boats.

Capt. H. B. Taylor, the most accomplished oarsman in the West, and R. P. Allen gave an exhibition pull in their double scull during the picnic, last Monday. It is probable this pair will enter for the senior double scull race, next season, of the Mississippi Valley Rowing Association Regatta.

Dr. Tanner's experiment of fasting forty days pales before the feat accomplished by members of the Missouri Gymnastic Society and Modoc Club, who succeeded in getting through all day Monday without a glass of beer. It was a terrible strain, but nearly all have gotten over it and are as well as ever.

The new pleasure boat Resolute, lately added to the fleet of the Modoc Club, makes excursions every evening on the Illinois side. A new island has been formed at the mouth of the creek, which has been named Modoc Island. The flag of the club proudly floats from the loftiest peak, which is 4 feet 9 3-4 inches above the level of the river. A crew last evening attempted to force a passage through the deep tangle of willows, but after getting in ten feet they were attacked by wasps, hornets and mosquitoes in vastly superior numbers, and had to make a hasty retreat.

Base Ball.

This afternoon at the Grand Avenue Park the Lone Stars, of New Orleans, will meet the Samuel C. Davis & Co. nine for the second time, and any amount of fun may be anticipated. All the employes of Samuel C. Davis & Co.'s store, together with the members of the firm, are expected to be present with their wives, their sisters and their cousins and their aunts. To-morrow afternoon the Stars have a tilt with the St. Louis Browns at the same park. The first game will be called at 4 o'clock and the second at 3:30 p. m.

Miscellaneous Notes.

Three rattling trotting races are in progress at the Fair Grounds this afternoon.

To-morrow afternoon the Lone Stars will play the Brown Stockings. The Red Stockings go to Belleville to-morrow morning.

Workmen have commenced to pitch the new half mile trotting track of Lucas and Pate on Page avenue, where the old Stocks' base ball park was located.

The pigeon shooting match between Capt. Pearce and Mr. Dozier resulted in favor of the former, he killing 43 birds out of the 50 shot at, 20 of them being double birds.

The Fair Association has concluded to make an enclosure of proper size on the prairie immediately west of the Fair Grounds, upon which the St. Louis Gun Club will give a five days' pigeon shooting tournament during the week of the Fair.

At the forthcoming bench show one of the most valuable contingents of the Fair, the St. Louis Kennel Club dogs will be exhibited, but will not be entered for premiums. The St. Louis kennel of pointers is unquestionably the finest in America.

In the winter of 1878, a number of California quail were turned loose upon the great farm of H. Clay Ewing, State Fish and Game Commissioner, near Jefferson City. They at once disappeared and it was thought that they had returned to the Pacific Slope. Gen. Harding, the Railroad Commissioner, now brings the pleasing information that within the past month three covies of half grown quail have been noticed on the farm, which shows that the birds are simply migratory and stamps the experiment as a success. California quail are protected by law until 1883. Mr. Ewing has just received and turned loose in Central Missouri a number of Mediterranean migratory quail, the first ever brought to this State.

M. E. S. C.

The Merry Evening Social Club will give a grand basket picnic at Barthold's Grove, Sunday, July 18. Conveyances will leave 1604 Biddle street, and also Seventh and Franklin avenue, at 7:30 a. m.

THE itching caused by skin diseases and the pain of abrasions is always relieved by Glenn's Sulphur Soap. Hill's Hair and Whisker Dye, Black or Brown, 50c.

Failure in the Milling Business.

Mr. W. H. Maurice, of the Union Steam Mills Company, on the corner of Florida and the Levee, failed to-day. Inquiries made as long ago as three days led the knowing ones to believe that he was in a shaky condition. It has been the impression among business men that he did not have a very large capital. The milling business has been unprofitable in the city for the past six months, and the failure of Maurice was only considered a matter of time. His liabilities are not known, but they are small. Amongst the creditors Harlow, Spencer & Co. are caught for $3,000; John Wahl, who is another prominent one, and several others. Mr. Maurice has only been engaged in the milling trade for about four years. Before that time he was engaged in banking and at one period was president of the Mercantile Bank. The failure scarcely caused a ripple on 'Change.

It is now stated that Mr. Maurice's liabilities are about $30,000. The Union Mills had a capacity of from 250 to 300 sacks a day.

POOR RUBY.

The Suicidal Cyprian Still Determined to Die.

Who She is and Where She is From—The Singular Story of Her Trip to Alton.

Ruby Tierson, the demi-mondaine who yesterday attempted a dramatic suicide, is today thinking over the situation and wishing that she had aimed a little lower with her revolver. She is lying in a darkened room at her home at 114 North Ninth street, and there was much generalship required to gain permission to see her. The doctor's injunctions were that she should be kept quiet, and she has been very sharply watched by the ladies in the house. A couple of gentleman friends of hers sat up all through the night with her, and it was only their presence that prevented a successful suicide. Twice she came near accomplishing her object, getting to the window and almost getting out when she was stopped. She has been very excitable since her attempt, and Ada Vance and the others firmly believe that sooner or later she will take her life. For the last eight months she has been inclined this way. About six months ago she tried to poison herself with morphine, but her design was discovered and frustrated, and Ada succeeded in hushing the whole matter up.

"What do you think will become of her?" said the reporter.

"I have no doubt that she will eventually do it," replied Miss Ada, "and I shall get her home as soon as I possibly can. You see, she thinks that she is degraded and despised by everybody owing to her occupation. She has felt this for a long time, but it has been lately forced in upon her by meeting a gentleman whom she knew East. She and I were walking together and we met this man. He followed us home, and she was obliged to tell me her story. I brought down another girl into the parlor and persuaded the gentleman that he was mistaken. But ever since then, of course, I have known as much about her as she knows herself."

IN ORDER TO SHIELD HERSELF

"Will her friends at home receive her."

"Certainly they will; they are very wealthy; they know nothing at all about what she is doing. They think she is married, and she could tell them anything she liked."

"If she goes home will she suicide anyhow?"

"Yes, the girl is deranged; she has become a monomaniac on this point."

A few minutes were then passed in Ruby's room. The poor girl had nothing to say. She seems to be undergoing the reaction from her intense excitement. Her head was bound up with linen, and she complained of great pain. Her body is bruised in many places from the fall and she is suffering from a low fever. An expression of pain is constantly in her eyes, and she has over and above all a wretched, despairing look. An error in the POST-DISPATCH yesterday made her age twenty-four; she was only nineteen on the 18th of June last, and the chances are, if her resolution holds good, that the poor little thing will never see twenty. She has made an utter wreck of her life and she is very tired of it.

"Poor little Ruby," said a well-known gentleman this morning in ear-shot of a reporter, "I have been expecting this for a long time. I have never met a girl as attractive as she was; beyond her personal beauty and charming manners, she was a splendid conversationalist. You couldn't bring up any subject that Ruby did not know something about and that she was not well able to talk upon. But that is no wonder; she was well educated and trained in as fine a house as there is in Northern New York."

"Did you know her family?"

"Yes; I knew her father at least. He is now a member of a heavy firm at Fort Edward, Washington county, New York, where Ruby was raised.

HER REAL NAME

is Lucy Hamilton, and her sister Aggie is a reigning belle of the Lake Champlain country."

"How did Ruby come to go wrong?"

"It was all a freak. She always was very eccentric and she was not very happy at home. Her folks were the strictest sort of church members, you know, and she didn't get on with them. She was at a very well-known female college when she made up her mind to 'see life'—and she has seen, it poor thing.'"

"Do her parents know what she is doing?"

"My God, no! Why, it would kill them. When I found her here, I came very near writing to her father, but she begged me so that I promised I would not."

"This was a sudden freak of hers yesterday?"

"Oh no, I've been looking for it. She has been very much in love with a gentleman who lives in Alton, and he has soured on her lately and neglected her. She and this friend of hers, 'Lottie,' went up to Alton in the early part of this week. She had made up her mind to have an explanation with this person, and if he had gone back on her she meant to shoot him. She did not see him and in the hotel there she shot at herself and missed altogether. That is where that empty chamber in the revolver comes from. As soon as she came down here she went on this tear, meaning to wind it up with a bullet in her brain."

"Ada Vance says she is going to send her home to her people in New York."

"I don't think Ruby will go. She will very probably try another bullet in a day or two and so settle all accounts and clean up the slate."

THE CIVIL COURTS.

Judge Woerner Confirms the Sale of the Late Patrick Conway's Property.

In the matter of the estate of Patrick Conway, deceased, the following objections to the sale of the real property, left by him, by the administrator de bonis non, were filed some time ago in the Probate Court:

That the assignee (the objector) gave public notice at the time of the sale that he claimed a part of the property exposed for sale, was in possession thereof, and held an adverse title.

That the property sold for an inadequate price.

That the administrator sold the several parcels in such a manner as to impose an unequal, unfair and excessive portion of the indebtedness due by the estate upon the portion owned by the assignee.

That there was an illegal and improper combination between the administrator, the reported owners of a majority of the unpaid claims, and the attorney of said administrator and others, to save to the owner of certain of the property such indebtedness as it is properly and fairly liable for.

That the Court had no power to undertake the sale of real estate, because the debts to the payment of which the proceeds of the sale were to be applied were barred by limitation.

Upon these objections Judge Woerner decided, this morning, that the matter for the consideration of the Court was whether the sale was conducted according to law, and whether the price obtained was as good as could be obtained if another sale were ordered. As there was nothing in the evidence indicating that either the estate or the heirs could obtain any benefit from a rejection of the sale already had and the ordering of a new sale the Court deemed it his duty to affirm the course taken by the administrator de bonis non.

Daniel Taylor's Estate.

The settlement filed in the Probate Court this morning, by John G. Priest, executor, in account with the estate of Daniel Taylor, deceased, shows that the total value of the property, appraised at the time of the testator's death, amounted to $82,037 96, and that the balance in the hands of the executor, after settling up the said estate, amounts to $63,867 57.

Two Gentlemen of Color Bound Over.

George James and Jerry Willis colored, were arrested at Washington, Franklin county, yesterday and brought up before the United States Commissioner this morning for selling whisky and tobacco without a license, and bound over to await the action of the grand jury.

Court Notes.

Court No. 5 adjourned this morning until next Tuesday, July 13.

The Probate Court, aside from Circuit Court No. 5, was the only court in session to-day.

Ellen Levelle and Thomas Levelle bring suit to recover property alleged to have been levied upon and taken wrongfully by John W. Drake, as constable.

THE FRENCH FETE.

Elaborate Preparations for a Brilliant Celebration on the 14th.

The executive committee of the French celebration on the 14th inst. at Koerner's Garden will hold its final meeting this evening at No. 515 Locust street. The preparations thus far have been very extensive and elaborate, and neither labor nor money has been spared. An unusual degree of enthusiasm has been aroused among the French population, and the night festival, or gives promise of being not only extraordinarily attractive and brilliant, but also a commemoration of France's new national fete day worthy the good taste and excellent judgment of our French compatriots. The interest manifested in the coming event is not confined to French citizens alone, but others have also evinced a desire to participate. Over 4,000 invitations have been issued, and yet the demand for tickets is increasing almost beyond the ability of the committees to supply it. There will be no charge for admission, but nobody will be admitted without a ticket, which can be procured from members of any of the committees.

A splendid and attractive programme has been arranged. The officers for the regular order of exercises have been selected from among the most prominent French citizens of St. Louis. Dr. N. N. De Menil will be president of the fete, and Mr. Emile Karst, the Vice-Consul of France, will officiate as honorary president. The resident consuls of Mexico, Italy, Switzerland, Belgium, Spain, Germany, England, Austria and Hungary and many leading and prominent citizens will be the chief and honorary guests of the occasion. The garden will be brilliantly illuminated with Chinese lanterns, torches, colored lights, etc., and handsomely decorated with the flags of the countries mentioned.

An interesting feature will be three large set pieces, colored and illuminated, designed by well-known local artists, and representing: France (allegorical); L'Antel de la Patrie, and the Capture of the Bastile.

The attractions and exercises comprise a grand instrumental concert by the excellent Knights of Pythias Band of twenty-six pieces, by which the patriotic airs and anthems of France and America will be rendered, viz.: La Marseillaise, Le Chant du Depart, Les Girondins, The Star Spangled Banner, etc., a vocal rendition of the Marseillaise, with solo by one of the most talented singers in the city, who will sing the couplets, the chorus being given by over 5,000 voices; four orations, two in French and two in English; choice selections by the Saxophone Quartette; a magnificent pyrotechnic display, the festivities concluding with a ball and grand banquet which will last all night. A small and reasonable price will be charged for the banquet, for which tickets are sold by the members of all the committees and at the garden on the evening of the celebration. Arrangements have been made with the Union Depot street railroad to run cars every hour after midnight, directly from Koerner's (formerly Staehlin's) Garden, making connection with the owl cars of all the other lines.

A RUPTURE OF 30 YEARS' STANDING CURED.

From Mr. Mathew Kern, for forty years an influential citizen of Missouri:

I was ruptured thirty years, and suffered to an extent only appreciated by those visited by this terrible disease. After being tortured by the use of trusses of various kinds my rupture became so large that I could get no truss that would keep it back. About three months ago I applied to Drs. Smythe and Fischer of the Vienna Institute for the Cure of Hernia, 1113 Washington avenue, this city, and received their treatment. Notwithstanding my advanced age (64 years) I was completely cured in three months. The treatment gave me no pain, and is not a surgical operation. MATHEW KERN, 1615 Clark ave.

Another Case.

I was treated at the Vienna Institute, 1113 Washington avenue, for a rupture of five years' standing, and was completely cured in two months. The treatment did not interfere with my occupation, and is painless, speedy and safe.

ROBT. G. A. MEIER, 306 N. Fifth st., Residence, 1107 Chouteau ave.

Being aware that hernia (rupture) has heretofore been regarded as an incurable disease, we thought fit to produce the above testimony in support of the fact we assert, that ALL cases of reducible hernia CAN BE CURED.

We believe it unnecessary to enter into details regarding the dangers of strangulated hernia; the many deaths that daily occur from that cause should be sufficient warning to the afflicted.

The Vienna Institute for the Cure of Hernia is permanently located at 1113 Washington avenue, this city, and is complete in all its appointments. Ladies will find pleasant apartments exclusively for the reception of females, with private consultation rooms. Persons from abroad can receive treatment and return the same day.

ENGLISH WOMEN.

The Most Peculiarly Dressed Females of the Civilized World.

Fantastic Ill-Taste With Which She Spoils Her Charms of Face and Figure.

The Wife of William Morris, the Poet—A Cleopatra Style of Beauty.

[Correspondence Inter-Ocean.]

LONDON, June 22.—It can not be denied that an Englishwoman is the most peculiarly dressed woman of the civilized world. One does not need to come, as I did, with only two days' interim between the Paris salon, where actresses and grandes dames exhibit daily their extravagant toilets, to the London Academy, where British fashion holds carnival, to see this and note the extraordinary difference between the reigning styles of the two capitals. In Paris an Englishwoman is recognized in a twinkling of the eye, so far away as she can be seen, by her radical and essential difference in dress, not only from the Parisienne, but by reason of her thorough unlikeness, in that respect, to the women of all other nations. A fertile source of amusement to Parisiennes is the extraordinarily confused and formless bunch of drapery that an English women wears in the region of her heels, and that her peculiarly rolling and energetic gait—so different from the walk of Continental ladies—causes to toss and wobble behind her in the most ungraceful and eccentric manner.

So much of late has been said and written about the present artistic renaissance in the matter of the English woman's dress, that and costumers have become monstrously inflated with an idea of their artistic superiority over all others of their kind. One of them, evidently expecting to draw patronage even from the capital of fashion itself, lately advertised her establishment in the Paris Figaro, heading that advertisement with the astounding announcement that, as London was now universally acknowledged to be the headquarters of artistic fashion, etc.! Imagine what shouts of derisive laughter went up from the boudoirs of the Champs-Elysees, and even from the shop about the Place du Throne, at such boast of London, a name never mentioned by the French in connection with matters of taste, except with jeers.

Henry James, Jr., in his "Bundle of Letters," written for the Parisian, pictured an æsthetically costumed English girl let loose in the streets of Paris. He described the effect of her dim greens and pale blues, her overflow of buttons, her pre-Rafaelite and mediæval tout ensemble upon the æsthetic Bostonian, who would evidently swoon at a rose in aromatic pain and die of exhaustion, if unfrocked, in other than a Corot-like day. But he did not tell us its effect upon the gamins in the street, the bootblack opposite, the butchers, the bakers, the candle-stick makers of Paris. Had he favored us with a letter from the postman who brought her letters from les enfants du siercle, who see her pass as they sit in the cafe, or from any of the habitues of the boulevards who met her and were astounded at the mediæval vision, would have been a thousand fold more piquant.

The truth is that this modern affectation of mediæval picturesqueness in English dress is not a whit less absurd than affectations usually are. For a thousand modern English women to do their hair in Anglo-antique mode is only to prove that nine hundred and ninety-nine of them are so utterly remote from the classic type of head and feature as to be simply reduced to an unmitigated ugliness that even their barbarian ancestors would have scoffed at. For a thousand English women to dress themselves like Francesca de Rimini is only to show that not five hundred of them have sufficiently departed from the full-bosomed, large-hipped and robust-limbed type of their foremothers to be other than ridiculous in the garb of an Italian court beauty, shaped to lithe grace and moulded to supple forms by generations of influences as remote from Anglo-Saxon ones as an Italian temple is different from druidical Stonehenge.

Many of the artistic costumes that are worn are charming things to read about. The newspaper accounts of Rubens hats, Valesquez corsages, Rembrandt collars, and pre-Rafaelite draperies make a charming, even if somewhat confused, picture in the mind's eye. And in very truth the general aspect of a crowd of English ladies, with their fanciful hats, fichues, collars and many-formed and hued robes, is far more interesting, picturesque and striking than the of Paris, that is, the ensemble. In detail it is quite another thing.

To read that English ladies are no longer dressed from the Magazine des Modes, but from Paul Veronese's and Titian's canvases, is enough to make the feminine mouth away off in Illinois, where there are no Titians and Paul Veroneses to serve as fashion plates, to drop wofully at the corners.

But let me tell you that to see some of these æsthetically designed costumes worn as I see them worn every day at the Royal Academy is quite a different thing.

Let it be remembered that after thirty, and very often before, the English complexion has only the ashes of the roses and lilies left, and that after thirty the English contours are Junoian, if not more. Then let it be remembered that there are many women in England over thirty, and when you know that this artistic rage has bitten matron and maid alike, you may understand that in many cases distance lends the only enchantment to the view of

AN ÆSTHETIC COSTUME.

The extraordinary variety of hats worn at the Academy exhibition is the first thing that attracts the Philistine eye. They are of all shapes and sizes, Gainsborough, Rubens, Vandyke, tiny turbans, close cottage bonnets, immense directoire bonnets, hats, caps—every shape that the imagination of man or woman could invent. So far all is well, for even if each face has not chosen the style that looks best, the tout ensemble of the crowd is infinitely more picturesque and interesting than one of our crowds, where every individual bonnet varies only in color and not in shape from its neighbor. One peculiarity I notice of many of the close hats is that a little hole is scooped out of the drooping back brim to admit of the egress of the Greek coil, popularly supposed to exist at present on every well-regulated feminine head. However, in a multitude of instances the Greek coil exists only as an Anglo-antique wad, hereinbefore described as of the size of an overcoat-button, and therefore the effect was almost as ridiculous as if it were a blank, lusterless little eye peeping out from under a huge eyebrow upon an utterly vapid and uninteresting world.

Never till I came to England did I see what is here called the LANGTRY HOOD.

Being named for the professional beauty, it is, of course, entirely English in origin, and it is worn as universally as if it were a pass-over sign. This Langtry hood is merely a three-cornered appendage lined with fancy colored silk (amber and black or crimson and black the favorite) in narrow stripes, and hangs pendant between the shoulders and the waist. Its only rival is the jet-trimmed round cape, which, it seems, no English woman is too poor to own.

Speaking of Mrs. Langtry reminds me to mention her portrait by Watts, which is a feature of the exhibition this year, and which gives the fair model ample cause to bring an action against the painter for libel. She is painted in profile, the head and shoulders against a dingy and crude green background. Probably, in the portrait, Mr. Watts was trying certain color experiments, which evidently had any other purpose than fidelity to nature for an object. Poor Mrs. Langtry's complexion is that of a patient in crisis of scarlet fever; her eyes are fixed and expressionless, and the plain black dress, without trimming or softening of lace or muslin at the throat, and her shabby, little, old-fashioned hat give her the appearance of a washerwoman's daughter going for the linen.

TASTE IS NOT A BRITISH CHARACTERISTIC,

and without it all æsthetic departures must result in ridicule and nonsense. If every lady could have her costume designed for her by a real artist in form and color, and one with too much sentiment to put Hecuba in Helen's raiment, then æsthetic costuming might make a revolution in the world. But it is almost certain that this revolution will never be brought about by English women—the most cultivated and intellectual women in the world—for taste they have not, and never had, with all their refined, æsthetic habits and aspirations. In all the higher qualities of womanhood and in most of the finer ones the average English woman is a superior to the average French woman—as we Americans flatter ourselves that we are superior to all mankind and most of the angels. But in the matter of taste the French woman even yet has the precedence, even although she is still in the bonds of slavery to Philistine fashion, while the clever, refined English woman is making a brave struggle to free herself from them.

Now and then an artistic costume is worn by an English woman in such manner that she seems a dream strayed out from the classic age, or a picture slipped down from the renaissance period. These ladies are, however, usually artists' wives, and are dressed by a taste that will ever be as unattainable by the crowds that fill the Royal Academy exhibition as genius is to the common herd. One of these ladies is and artist, whose name as one of the firm of celebrated London house decorators is known all over the world. She is a mysterious, Egyptian-looking woman, with great, strange, sad eyes, an Oriental complexion, burning scarlet lips, and the expression of ineffable remoteness and vagueness that one in imagination gives to the sphynx. In reality she is said to be the most commonplace and uninteresting of women, and it was merely her strangely unreal and visionary beauty that caught her husband's heart. He was at that time fully under the influence of the pre-Rafaelite fever, which his friend Ruskin did so much to spread among the artistic circles of England and America. The young lady's face was just one of the inexpressibly melancholy, worm-eaten and cankered ones that the pre-Rafaelites adore—just the type of young women coming down the "golden stairs" in Burne Jones' picture at the Grosvenor Gallery this year—and so Morris married her away from the counter where she served. Not long ago the lady wore at an evening party a robe of this sheerest, filmiest white muslin, fine enough to be drawn through a ring.

THE PETTICOAT

under it must have been the same, for the folds of the robe clung to her body and limbs as if cut there by the finest chisel. At the waist this thin robe was confined by a long supple chain in form of a serpent, which, after writhing about her body, dropped its jeweled head by her left side, where its diamond eyes glittered and burned like fire. Egyptian bracelets and necklace adorned her arms and neck, and an Egyptian masque gathered and held the folds of the robe at the throat. Her black hair was one thick mass of short curls, and lay close down to her eyes, crept in and out by another golden serpent with jeweled scales and burning eyes. One would have said she was Cleopatra, who had turned her asps into gold and jewels and come to life to dazzle the eyes of a barbarian world. How curiously anachronistic and disturbing must have seemed the ordinary platitudes of society from such a vision.

BRIDES' TROUSSEAUX.

A Sensible Fashion Coming Into Vogue—Adapting Outfits to Future Circumstances.

[N. Y. Cor. Louisville Courier-Journal.]

An important and salutary change is taking place in the preparation of brides' trousseaux, and one that will have a deeper and more lasting effect than might be anticipated from any matter that belongs to the wardrobe. It has been the custom heretofore in this country for parents to supply the daughter's trousseau on her marriage without any reference to her future condition in life, but simply in accordance with her own wishes, the vanity of her mother or the previous extent and nature of her pelongings. The presents were made in the same way, not in accordance with the future means and position of the married couple, but to suit the style and belongings of the bride's parents, so that it is not at all uncommon to see two people living on a very narrow income, yet actually burdened with fine clothes and ornamented jimcracks for which they have neither space nor opportunity for their display. The finery is laid away or worn, when something less elaborate and costly would be much more suitable; the gorgeous pieces of silver or plated ware find their way to the "duplicate shop," where they are exchanged, possibly for something that is wanted, or sold for half price.

All this is the height of folly and very different from the custom in the best families in England. There, no matter what the wealth of the parties, the bride's outfit is graded by the means of her husband, and the necessities of her position as a wife. If he is higher in the social scale, every effort is made to provide that which is suitable for a more exalted rank; but if, as is frequently the case here, he is a young man without means, and with his place to make in the world, the money that would have been spent on an expensive outfit is put into useful household articles or wisely invested for the girl's benefit.

This method has been strictly followed in several well-known families recently, where the daughters have married young men of good position, but limited income, which must of necessity govern the style of their living. The trousseaux in these cases were very moderate, and consisted of useful and practical rather than rich and ornamental articles, such garments, in fact, as could be replaced when necessary without depleting too fast and too far the husband's purse. The unappropriated funds in one instance furnished all the linen and china for the new household, and in another bought United States 4 per cent bonds, the interest of which will at least enable the wife to buy her husband Christmas presents without drawing upon him for the funds.

Many a poor bride has had costly trained dresses laid away in her trunks, costly knick-knacks scattered or packed for which she had no space, who had not a dollar she could call her own to give, to spend or to keep. It is well to provide girls with a good outfit; it is sometimes the only one they have in their lives. But let it be suited to their wants in the future as well as the present. The wreck of lives might be saved by this sort of care, for it furnishes a lesson as well as a provision; and what can be expected of young girls who have been taught by precept and example to subordinate everything to vanity and display.

Piles of underclothing are as unnecessary as a very large number of dresses, for the former are easily supplied and renewed, and the latter go out of fashion and have to be remodeled almost before they have been worn.

A very fashionable, but also a very sensible, girl was asked recently in regard to her trousseau, which her young friends supposed would be worth seeing. "I am not going to have any trousseau," she replied very coolly.

"Not going to have any trousseau?" They looked aghast.

"No; why should I? I have enough clothes, and a black silk and my traveling dress, in which I shall be married, will be all I shall require; for Jack, you know, is poor, and we do not expect to go into society very much."

"But why not have it when you could just as well as not?" chorused the girls.

"Because I would rather have the money."

"Oh, what a mercenary girl," laughed her friends; but they knew this was not so. She was simply capable of reflection and of carrying out a purpose.

ANNIE ROBERTSON NOXON.

Her Reflections on Events and Things in New York.

Starving Considered as a Means of Livelihood.

A Metropolitan Circus—Fashion's Frivolities and Frolics.

Special Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, July 7, 1880.—Once more all the big and little guns have been let off, while delusive excursions, flying Dutchmen, penny shows, sick babies, sun-strokes and showers have carved a monument to another natal day, and pallid, wild-eyed youths have crawled to work an hour late on the morning of the 6th of July, after making a resolve to abstain from future celebrations by the side of which New Year oaths sink into insignificance. The atrocious small boy and his toy pistol have done their worst, and a smell of exploded bombs pervades the air and the faint blue smoke ascended from democratic combustions hangs like a veil over the little island and the big flag where a possible future ruler presides at present. Prudent people went into a retreat on the night of the third. The German population turned out in large force on Sunday as if to shame the too moral niceties of patriots, and got sick on this our bier, and wrestled and bowled and shot and danced away the long bright day, and singing maudlin love longs in which Vaterland was somehow entangled, late in the night, had evidently forgotten all about the sacred occasion.

The long drouth has continued with an especial reference to the needs of the "Fourth" for a damper, and as usual the fireworks were put out and everybody drenched on Monday. It is an ill wind that blows nobody good. It may be treason, but it is the truth that we needed the cool, pleasant rain on thirsty hills, valleys and vineyards more than we did banners and bombshells. And in the joy of marrowfat peas, roasting ears and approaching watermelons, the Fourth is already forgotten, except by the luckless canines whose tails lie on ash heaps, tangled up in a bunch of Chinese explosives, and the freckled fugitives whose noses are under plaster, and who only go home when the old man is out. All the boys heard from so far have solemnly vowed to consecrate their pennies next year to the foreign missions—no more fireworks and

LOST FINGERS.

Mothers shed grateful and credulous tears, and the germ of the next Fourth slumbers under a mountain of good but weak resolves. It would be rather difficult to imagine anything more dismal than the seaside in a steady rain storm, when there are no extenuating circumstances or clouds with silver linings, or cosy places of shelter and sandwiches waiting for hungry refugees. Certainly, the sixty or seventy thousand hardy fun-seekers who went to the seaside on Monday will forever remember their experiences and stay at home next year on the "greatest public holiday of America." The demands of the hungry and thirsty people would under the most favorable circumstances have been enormously in excess of the supply, but during the misery and misfortunes of Monday, the dryness and wetness of the trampled and crowded wretches in their Sunday clothes—which in most cases they had torn off in the squeeze and jam incident to embarking and disembarking—the suffering and dissatisfaction made it a day long to be stored up by all who participated in its varied sorrows. The god of battle did not seem to take any stock in this commemoration; at least everything went wrong, and at Rockaway the senes were indiscribable. It is ludicrous enough to those who think of it in easy ceairs, after a hearty dinner; but it was pathetic and mournful to those who were stripped of their best attire, hustled, starved and tossed about by an angry sea, which flung whole waves on deck over the already hapless passengers, made men and women sea-sick and unfitted pale-faced babies for the enjoyment of pop-corn balls and warm sweet lemonade. The Columbia is a very staunch, able steamer, but she behaved like a pinnace in the churning waves of Monday, and shipped water when she felt like it; and whenever the women on board were beginning to feel a little more comfortable, or the men less like swearing. Positively nothing to eat—think of that on a day devoted to barbecued pigs and immolated clams!

The candy and banana men, with an unexpected affluence staring them in the face, realized that they were insufficiently supplied to meet the exigencies of the occasion, and were on the verge of devouring what remained, and thus die. Everybody cursed the day we celebrate, like Macbeth's constituents, not loud but deep, while steadily poured the rain, and the wind flapped coat tails and tore up Sunday rigging in mad glee. Several women had their dresses torn off in the struggle to get on the boat, and all went home savagely hungry, mad as hornets, and now decline to speak to the while Rockaway is under a ban of displeasure.

It is rather surprising how little interest on the whole is manifested here over the heroic trial of Dr. Tanner, who is undergoing at present, probably, the worst pangs known to humanity. Persons glancing at the matter casually do not think of it with weight, or realize that the man is being starved by a fanaticism which may, or may not, result in good to his fellow men. Men who have been given to spasmodic perusals of the Scientific American, doctors and newspaper people alone watch Tanner's progress, and, in the short walks he takes, he is not followed or distressed by wonder-stricken crowds. He is perhaps looked upon as an amiable lunatic by the thousands who read of his self-abnegation at a time when Spanish mackerel, clams, muscles, peaches and blackberries are in the market. And nobody really believes that the inoffensive old gentleman will live through his feat. It seems rather cruel in his watchers to breakfast, lunch and dine, as usual, while his wild eyes, pallid face, nervous fingers and the faintly beating pulse denote a desperate longing for food, and all the anguish there is for healthy tissues and organs while being deprived of sustenance. It makes one shudder to read of such tortures in Jules Verne's vivid phrasing; but the men who starved on board the Chancellor were not tempted by the very best market in the world, and were starving from necessity, not dogma. Those who sympathize with the Doctor in his attempt can not see the further painfulness of denying himself water. Very foolishly, it appears, he has lived without swallowing a mouthful of water for nine days, to disarm captious critics who affirmed water to be too sustaining. This seems a needless agony.

Even an ignoramus who knows nothing of psychology must believe that the mind comes out of such a struggle as this temporarily if not permanently impaired. What fearful and harassing dreams must flit through the clouded brain while, like the gnawing of the cravings of hunger rack the body. No one will dispute that Dr. Tanner has earned his paltry one thousand dollars if he survives this trial. And it is to be hoped that no other bigot will attempt the same feat. If it were to see if one man could eat more than another there would no doubt be a surfeit of the thing. It may be that before this reaches the press, the fluttering pulse will have ceased, and it will have been demonstrated that the day of miracles is past, and the elevated hearts of the landladies in the land will sink down again, as they sadly realize that boarders must eat.

It is worth one's while to drop into Macy's at the populuos corner of Sixth avenue and Fourteenth street on a rainy day and watch the lively circus in progress there, the participants and actors being women from all parts of the United States and Jersey, and a few distracted-looking men who have the air of being caught at a mild embezzlement. The husband or lover who is inveigled into shopping and lunch never seems to entirely recover his independence afterwards.

Talk about kaleidoscopes; here are more colors than a prison ever thought of, mixing and mingling, while the screeching of saleswomen for the inattentive little cash girls, and the grotesque jargon of shoppers and chance acquaintances who meet to gossip, make a babel of sound from which one escapes to perch on a lunch stool in the refectory up-stairs, where the screeching is shriller and the rattle of salad dishes and lemonade glasses drowns one's own thoughts. All the tables are occupied and the pale, tired waitresses in ridiculous liveries of aprons and tiny mob caps of plaited muslin can hardly move through the hungry crowds. This is the place to see a fragile beauty in a ravishing bonnet of barberry vines and red satin ribbon, black silk dress and lace overdress, devour a lobster salad, ham sandwich, plate of sardines and bread and a vanilla cream in fifteen minutes, while women with shawl-strap bundles, waiting for a place, stand wearily by and admire the length of her ear-rings and her front hair crimps. This lunching is a big thing to shoppers who are savage and hungry as and yet it is a circus, seen in its best aspects. The pretty girl who leaves her escort at the door piles through the crowd up stairs with astonishing vigor and petrifies the weary little demoiselle who takes her order by the celerity with which she clears her dishes.

It is great fun to watch regular shoppers at their daily avocation. They make the selection of an invisible net or a webbing belt a matter of serious reflection, and wait half an hour, if need be, for two penny change, which a western woman would have sacrificed in utter contempt for its insignificance. New York is about the only city in the country where it absolutely doesn't matter what one wears.

Side by side in stages or the elevated road sit women in Paris muslin, and cashmere shawls. McDougal plaids in heavy merino jostle silk striped voille de religeuse, and occasionally a full costume of drap d'ete sweeps majestically along behind an airy toilet of surah spotted grenadine.

Women who are in passe styles, or who wear old-fashioned clothes, can avoid all staring. What in St. Louis would be thought outrageous is not even deemed eccentric here. Nobody questions the right of anybody else to dress as she please. It is only those who have luckily invented something new and startling who get gazed at from all directions. Not that your pattern is pretty, or ugly—simply that some one has found something new.

The latest flannel and stuff costumes are very far from being pretty. Their wildest adherents could not dream that they were, but they are immensely novel. The waist is a scant Garibaldi, worn with a white dickey and collar, and a girdle laced with cardinal silk cords and tassels. The skirt is short, very full, tucked in a cumbersome manner above the hem, and shirred in the back from the girdle to the depth of twelve or fourteen inches. At the bottom of the skirt, set on in fluffy plaits, is a two-inch frill of red silk, satin or opera flannel to look as much like the escaping edge of a balmoral skirt as possible. With this buccaneer style of dress has come in a long, easy stride—the first fungi grown on the soil immediately outside of the track for regular pedestrians. This walk can be easily imitated by the woman who fancies herself two minutes behind train time, and who doesn't wish to run. Keep the head well forward and carry an umbrella rigidly in one hand and a reticule in the other.

This dress, which is agreeable for clambering over rocks and be aches, will be copied in a modified way for street suits in silk and kindred fabrics. One elegant black satin seen on the street is a good illustration of style. The skirt was of plain rich satin, shirred perpendicularly in groups, the shirring being lost under the beetle wing tabs of the coat, which was of checker spotted satin. These oval-shaped pieces were lined with pale Ophelia satin, with large jet balls bigger than a mulberry set on at intervals of two inches around each. A plaited frill of the purple satin gave the petticoat effect to the skirt. The bonnet was of the richest hue of tuscan, covered with variegated violets and pansies, and a huge flot of yellow satin ribbon where the crown ought to be.

Now is the time for country people who are not avant-couriers to fashion to buy suits in New York. All the handsome dresses of combined satin and jungpoor brocade in the gorgeous golds, greens and purples, that were lett over, are being offered at reductions of one hundred per cent, and they are still as attractive as ever. Only the far-seeing modiste knows that this draped and bouffant style's

DAYS ARE NUMBERED.

The pretty handkerchief dresses were so much the rage that the market has been exhausted and there are no more to be had. Ginghams are stylish and very necessary to the consumption of the ocean of cheap laces that the spring flung on the market. Some very queer dresses continue to dazzle and afflict the eye of the country cousin, who agonizingly regrets selling Aunt Huldah's changeable snuff and green silk to the dealer in china shepherdesses and lava smoking sets. Queer-colored and grotesque figured old cheney silks are made into long coats, or cuirasse basques, to be worn over any skirt, without regard to previous race, color or condition.

This outre mode has been copied in chintz and cretonnes not very effectively, as it was evidently the rich quality of the brocade in the first place which rendered it fashionable.

Those who do home dress-making, beware of tucking up and looping overskirts. The plainer and straighter the American woman can look now the more stylish. Pretty girls look exceedingly well in the old Dame Winthrop dresses with surpliced, short waists, wide belts with a gigantic bunch of roses, pansies or water lilies at the left side. Silk mits are invariably worn with this costume. For white dresses take any thin goods, volle religieuse or crepe, made with this style waist, and two skirts tucked, and finished with plaited frills of languedoc or valenciennes lace. The top skirt to the knee, and shirred from the belt all around. A. R. N.

Putting Him to the Test.

[From the Port Austin News.]

The following is a good one in the way of a religious test—good because it is true. A minister not long since held protracted meetings not far from Port Austin or Bad Axe. One day one of his converts, while driving his oxen with a heavy lood behind them over the bad roads between the above-named places, accidentally looked back and discovered his pastor covertly following behind. The convert could not imagine the cause of such strange conduct, but thought he would keep an eye on his movements. For two or three miles the man of holy orders hung on the rear of the slowly-moving oxen—now crouching behind stumps, now moving like a phantom through the skirting forest, occasionally spurting like a quarter horse across some open space to gain the cover of some friendly fence, to keep field side like a stray dog—again, dodging through thickets, diving through cattails, crawling behind logs, bounding over pools of water, the pastoral legs seemed equal to any emergency. All the while a pursuer kept very near near, ever eager, ever listening. Finally straightening up, calling the brother driving the team by name: "Brother ——, I have followed you two miles to find out whether you would swear at them oxen. I am satisfied the Lord has filled you with the genuine article. Bless the Lord! Another soul saved! Amen! Good morning." And the good man walked contentedly back. The man with the oxen drove slowly on, studying on the mysterious ways of Providence, and wondering how it would have been with his soul if he had not seen his watchful pastor all the time.

RELIC OF THE FOURTH.

I heard a mother's plaining voice,
"Where is my darling son?
My Charley had two pearly ears,
But you have only one.

"My Charley had upon each hand
A thumb and fingers four;
But you have only four in all,
And they are blackened o'er.

"My Charley had a pair of eyes,
But one have you, strange lad:
And Charley had a pretty nose,
I'm sure you never had.

"My boy had brows above his eyes,
And hair upon his head;
Your face is black as any hat,
His face was white and red.

"My Charley's clothes were new and clean,
All rags and dirt are yours;
From head to foot you seem to be
A regiment of sores!"

Then shrilly cried that wrecked boy,
"Don't know me, ma? I say,
I've had the bossest, bulliest time
Of all my life to-day."

She stoops her down in agony;
Though sorely she's bereft,
She has a mother's yearning still,
And clings to what is left.

A DARING MEXICAN.

With Nothing But a Butcher-Knife He Kills a Big Puma.

[From the Phœnix (A. T.) Expositor.]

Wm. H. Edwards, of Tempe, called on us Monday, and from him we learn of a piece of reckless daring performed, a few days previous, by a Mexican, which for downright foolishness puts to flight any of the daring performances of the heroes of the dime novels. It appears that the Mexican, accompanied by his dog, was on his way to Tempe to do some trading, when the dog treed a large California lion. The man was unarmed, save with a large butcher-knife, but nothing daunted, and knowing where he could sell the skin for a dollar, he whipped out his knife and started up the tree after the specimen of the king of beasts. Slipping up within reaching distance, he coolly plunged the knife into the animal just behind the shoulder, which so startled him that he leaped to the ground and was instantly bounced by the dog, when the man hastened from the tree, sprang upon the beast and planted a home thrust through his heart, without further damage to himself than having his hat torn in pieces. The lion measured about eight feet from the tip of his nose to the tip of his tail, and had he got one good blow at the man he would have mashed him into a jelly. Mr. Edwards informed us that this same Mexican killed one of these beasts about three months ago that measured over nine feet from tip to tip, using no other weapon than a small pistol and knife, and that he came near losing his life in that encounter. Mr. Edwards pays him $1 each for the hides, and is tanning them for boot leather.

Sad Accident to Miss Neilson.

[From the San Francisco Post.]

Last Tuesday the dramatic critics of our contemporaries, referring to Miss Neilson's impersonation of Juliet the evening before, all stated that "the beautiful tragedienne was annoyed by a slight huskiness of voice." The next morning these purveyors of intelligence said, "We regret to announce that Miss Neilson's trifling cold has increased to a most painful thickness of utterance." The next morning the matter was represented as becoming really serious. "The severe bronchial affection with which the charming actress has been recently afflicted has become so marked as to almost destroy the intelligibility of her speech."

The cold facts, as ascertained by the representatives of this paper, however, are as follows: It seems that a few months ago Miss Neilson discovered that her hair was falling out slightly from some cause, and at once purchased a quantity of Madame Dandruffi's Grand International Anglo-Ethiopean Aurora Borealic Hair Restorer, warranted to make hair grow profusely on any live surface (see small circulars). So wonderful was the effect of this marvelous preparation (see certificate of Tsar of Russia as to full coat of hair produced on favorite Chinese hairless dog) that the actress refused to be separated from it day or night, and invariably took a small vial of it to the theater to be rubbed on her head between the acts (it being also a sovereign remedy for headache, fistula and chilblains).

On Monday evening, by some mischance, she was handed this vial by mistake for the property bottle supposed to contain the sleepy elixir Juliet takes in the fifth act. In the excitement of acting, Miss N. did not discover the substitution until when, at the close of the scene, she became annoyed by feeling a hair in her mouth, which she in vain endeavored to dislodge. By the end of the sixth act the hair had increased to twenty, and the following morning the star discovered, to her horror, that her tongue was actually covered with a glossy coat of rapidly growing hair. The effect was to give her voice an accent which would be amusing were it not an apparent presage of early strangulation. With great difficulty Miss Neilson managed to go through her part the next night, though indulging in a just-landed-at-Castle-Garden intonation astounding to her admirers, albeit much applauded by the gallery. A consultation of physicians was held, but they were unable to do anything more to the purpose than send in their bills.

At this moment a reply was received from Mme. Dandruffi, who had been telegraphed to, "Am coming out on special train with antidote. Meanwhile get shaved often." A barber was immediately called in, and the "coral-tinted tongue" of the fair Adelaide carefully shaved. By having the operation repeated each day after dinner she hopes to pull through until the needed succor arrives, though how she will make out next Sunday when the barber shops all close at noon under the new law, Heaven only knows. Fortunately, however, she does not have to play on that day. To an extra dispatch urging her to increased haste Mme. Dandruffi replied while passing Chicago, "Hold the tongue for I am coming!"

We shall keep our readers advised of Mme. D.'s progress and arrival, and where she locates the depot for the sale of the astonishing restorative. It does indeed seem, from the above incident, that Providence itself advertises this truly remarkable invention, which is in so much better taste than the stale newspaper artifices resorted to by the venders of spurious and inferior preparations. Parties desiring to personally inspect the above mentioned wonderful triumph of the G. I. A. E. A. B. H. R., are cordially invited to step up to Miss Neilson's rooms on the sixth floor of the Palace Hotel. She will show her tongue with pleasure from 6 a. m. to 7 p. m., inclusive. No. 9,018. Don't knock; walk right in.

How Old is Glass?

[From the Saturday Review.]

The oldest specimen of pure glass bearing anything like a date is a little molded lion's head, bearing the name of an Egyptian king of the eleventh dynasty, in the Slade collection at the British museum. That is to say, at a period which may be moderately placed as more than 2,000 years B. C., glass was not only made, but made with skill, which shows that the art was nothing new. The invention of glazing pottery with a film of glass is so old that among the fragments which bear inscriptions of the early Egyptian monarchy are beads possibly of the first dynasty. Of the latter class there are numerous examples, such as the bead found at Thebes, which has the name of Queen Hatasoo of Hashep, of the eighteenth dynasty. Of the same period are vases and goblets and many fragments. It cannot be doubted that the story prepared by Pliny, which asigns the credit of the invention to the Phœnicians, it is so far true that these adventurous merchants brought specimens to other countries from Egypt. Dr. Schliemann found disks of glass in the excavation at Mycenæ, though Homer does not mention it as a substance known to him. That the modern art of the glass-blower was known long before is certain from presentations among the pictures on the walls of a tomb at Benni Hassan, of twelfth Egyptian dynasty; but a much older picture, which probably represented the same manufacture, is among the half obliterated scenes in a chamber of the tomb of Thy, at Sakkara, and dates from the time of the fifth dynasty, a time so remote that it is not possible, in spite of the assiduous researches of many Egyptologers, to give it a date in years.
